HUERTA REVEALS PLANS

Steadfast I wait to find myself amidst the storm, but even in the storm one must navigate the ship. We are in the lion's mouth, but the lion will not find it easy to eat us.—Huerta, in statement to Boston American.

NEW HAVEN PAID $1,500 TO M'NARY

—T. E. Byrnes.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Timothy E. Byrnes, former vice-president of the New Haven Railroad, was the first witness today at the continued inquiry by the Interstate Commerce Commission into the financial affairs of the road.

Mr. Byrnes told how W. S. McNary of Boston had been paid $1,500 for expert opinion concerning the stand which the New Haven should take with regard to the Grand Trunk's proposed entrance into Boston.

Mr. Byrnes declared that Mr. McNary was a publicist, a former member of Congress, a transportation expert, a furniture store clerk, and a public-spirited man all in one at the time of his employment by the New Haven.

"Mr. McNary's chief thoughts were in the public interest," said Mr. Byrnes.

"Did you pay him for these thoughts?" asked Folk.

"From $1,000 to $1,500."

SPELT LIKE BATTING HIM.

"Did he think under your direction."

"He was not influenced by that."

"You have said that Mr. McNary made public addresses opposing the New Haven," said Folk. "Did he diminish his earnestness in this condemnation of the New Haven after you had paid him?"

"Not a particle," replied Byrnes. "Both before and after his employment by the road I often felt like batting him over the head for his attacks on us."

"Did you cease paying him because he continued his attacks?"

"No, I insisted that his employment cease when he took public office as a Massachusetts dock commissioner."

Mr. Byrne said that practically the entire scope of Mr. McNary's work for the New Haven was the preparation of statements in manuscript setting forth his opinion on "Grand Trunk matters." He also advocated that the New Haven interest itself in steamship lines, said Mr. Byrnes. He declared that it was for these opinions only and not to influence his public attitude that Mr. McNary was paid.

$1,000 VOUCHER TO BOWLES.

Mr. Byrnes added that he was not surprised when Mr. McNary rendered

WILSON HONORS HAGGERTY

A large wreath, the personal tribute from President Wilson to the memory of Corporal of Marines Daniel A. Haggerty, the first American to fall at Vera Cruz, arrived today at the Haggerty home, No. 16 Harding street, East Cambridge.

The wreath was securely packed, and will not be opened by the family until the day of "Dan's" funeral.

As today wore on and the United States armored cruiser Montana, which is bringing the bodies of three New England youths who died at Vera Cruz, failed to appear, the prospect increased that Corporal Haggerty's funeral will take place on Friday instead of Thursday.

MONTANA DELAYED.

The Montana left New York yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, taking the outside route (not via Long Island Sound). So she was not expected in Boston harbor before 1 o'clock this afternoon at the earliest. In event of her arrival here today the funeral would take place Thursday.

But up to 1 o'clock the cruiser had not even been sighted from Highland Light. Instead, there was report of thick weather in Massachusetts Bay through the night, with probable delay to the big sea fighter.

Those in charge of the funeral plans were anxious to learn as quickly as possible when the Montana could be expected to dock. But, failing to receive any information up to this afternoon, it was felt that the cruiser would not be here until tomorrow, in which event the funeral would be arranged for Friday.

The management of the George F. Blake Pump Works of East Cambridge notified Mayor Timothy W. Good of Cambridge today that its entire force of several thousand men and women will be lined up on the sidewalk on Third street as the funeral procession passes. Mayor Good is much pleased with this idea. He hopes other large factories in the

THREATENS GUERILLA WARFARE IF CITY OF MEXICO IS TAKEN

VERA CRUZ, May 12.—Fighting continues at Tampico, with the rebels gaining ground, though the Federals are making a stout resistance. A considerable portion of the city, according to late reports, has been taken by the Constitutionalists.

By LUIGI BARZINI,
Special Correspondent of the American and the London Daily Telegraph.

MEXICO CITY, May 12.—I have had a long talk with President Huerta concerning the questions cabled to me by you.

General Huerta requested that the questions I proposed to ask him be set forth in writing and promised to reply fully and personally, also in writing.

There are five questions, the answers to which should reveal the program of the Provisional President in regard to mediation with the revolutionists and the United States.

Huerta as "Fate's Arbiter"

I shall transmit the document in full as soon as it reaches my hands.

Meanwhile I report what General Huerta said in the course of a long conversation. "Fate," General Huerta said, "has willed that in my hands should rest the decision of the question of life or death for our national independence. I have no right to barter the independence of Mexico for my own tranquility and that of my country. It is my duty to fight until death. We are showing the world how to defend a principle—that of national sovereignty.

"We are small and weak in comparison with the power which threatens us, but conscious our rights are being trampled under foot, I have confidence in the future. My government may be burned or pulverized, but it must remain at its post and resist American imposition and every request that diminishes our national independence, whether it comes from the United States or sister nations.

Steadfast I wait to find myself amidst the storm, but even in the storm one must navigate the ship. We are in the lion's mouth, but the lion will not find it easy to eat us.

"In any case, a fight for right and independence, even if unsuccessful, is not without use. It creates a sentiment and establishes an example which are sources of strength and which will be copied in the future.

"If I were to give way, I should deserve to be cursed by future generations as a traitor. I am willing to die if I must, but I am not going to disgrace myself.

"I do not speak in hatred of America and Americans. Indeed, I have many very dear personal friends among the Americans, and I have taken measures for the defence of the lives and goods of resident Americans, measures, however, which have not been reciprocated.

"No, I am not an enemy except to those who insult me. But the conquest of Mexico will be a difficult task for America. It will cost a great deal more than they imagine.

Now's the Time To Buy Used Autos

Now that the auto show is over and people have selected cars from among the newer models, other owners are being sought for the cars that have been replaced.

Many of these machines look as though they were fresh from the factory. Many of them haven't rendered one-fourth their full service. All are in perfect running order.

The difference between the sale prices and the original prices represents a considerable saving to those interested in buying a used car, if they will just take the time to investigate.

Look under the heading "Used Cars and Accessories" in the "Want Ad" section of the Boston American from day to day. There many excellent offerings are listed.

If some special make and model you seek is not found there write a "Want Ad" of your own.

State precisely the kind of car you are looking for and the price you want to pay, and when the ad is ready leave it with any of the American's "Want Ad" Stations, the branch office at 264 Washington Street, main office at 80 Summer Street, or a bill for his thoughts, having ceased to be surprised at anything. He also said McNary was not hired by the New Haven, in order that the road might have a representative in the public's camp.

The inquiry switched suddenly to the Panama Canal bill and the alleged lobby in connection with that campaign in Congress, when Governor Foik asked Mr. Byrnes:

"Did you pay $1,000 to Clarence McKnight, a Washington attorney, in connection with the Panama Canal tolls bill?"

Mr. Byrnes said that at Mr. Mellen's request he had made out a voucher to Rear Admiral W. E. Rowles, head of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, for $1,000.

Byrnes explained that Mr. Mellen had been asked by Admiral Bowles to contribute $1,000 for the payment of counsel in connection with the fight on the Panama Canal bill and that Mellen had directed Byrnes to make the voucher to Bowles.

$35,000 "Prayers" by Baxter.

It later developed that the money was paid to McKnight, although Mellen had no direct connection with him, said Byrnes.

Mr. Byrnes denied that the $1,000 was paid in this way to cover the payment of McKnight by the New Haven.

Governor Foik then asked Byrnes concerning the payment by the New Haven of $351 to Sylvester Baxter for the preparation of 15,000 prayers.

"What do you know about that?" asked Folk.

"I should thing that fifteen thousand prayers would be all too few to supply the New Haven," replied Byrnes.

He went on to explain that a booklet entitled, "Prayers from the Hill People," had been prepared, setting forth the cause of these people in the railroad contraversy.

Folk asked him if the New Haven were not thus paying for prayers purporting to come from the simple hearts of the people of the Hill rather than from the lively imagination of the New Haven press agent.

Mr. Byrnes admitted that the New Haven certainly stood the cost of the booklet's preparation, but he denied that any attempt at deception was intended.

It also appeared from Mr. Byrne's testimony that the New Haven had contributed $3,000 to the treasury of the Hillie Town Association, an organization not unfriendly to the railroad.

EXPECT MELLEN TO TESTIFY.

Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven, is in Washington, but it is uncertain whether he will take the stand. Whether the hitch is due to Attorney-General McReynold's intervention in the case, on the ground that to put important witnesses on the stand would give them immunity, Joseph W. Folk, chief counsel for the commission, refused to reveal.

It became known today that Mr. Mellen had not been subpoenaed in this investigation, as was generally understood. John W. Crim, Mr. Mellen's attorney, is of the opinion that Mr. Mellen will not appear.

"He will be a fool if he does," said Mr. Crim.

It had been announced that Mr. Mellen would go on the stand.

"That means he will take the stand voluntarily, as Governor Folk says he has not been subpoenaed." It was suggested to Mr. Crim.

"As his attorney I assure you that he will not take the stand in an investigation like this unless he is compelled to," said Mr. Crim.

Mr. Byrnes declared that he believed Mr. Mellen was eager to take the stand and would do so without an official summons.

"Mr. Mellen has never exactly liked the way the New Haven officials let him down," said Mr. Byrnes. "They made a goat of him when he resigned, following the New Haven revelations. Just after he resigned he said to me: 'I am going down to my little farm and raise goats. Since the New Haven crowd has raised me so carefully, I want to try my hand at goat raising.'"

SHAPIRO TELLS OF AUTO RIDE OF GANGSTERS

NEW YORK, May 12.—The stage was cleared today in the murder trial of former Police Lieutenant Charles A. Becker for the star witness, "Bald Jack" Rose, whose dramatic recital at Becker's first trial for the murder of Herman Rosenthal made him a central figure of interest.

"Willie" Shapiro, the chauffeur who drove the four gunmen to the scene of the killing, was under subpoena to testify just before Rose.

Although Shapiro was a witness at the first trial, so many objections were lodged against his testimony by the defence that practically all of it was barred from the record. District Attorney Whitman's chief object in calling Shapiro was to learn if the name of Becker had been mentioned on the way to the scene of the crime to reassure the gunmen and to keep their nerve up.

Dr. Dennis Taylor, who was called when Rosenthal was shot, was the first witness of the day, and he was immediately followed by Shapiro. The chauffeur was questioned by District Attorney Whitman in person, and told how, on the night of July 15, 1912, he was called to Tom Sharkey's saloon, in Fourteenth street, where he picked up Rose, Sam Schepps and Harry Vallon. Later he carried "Gyp the Blood," "Dago Frank," "Lefty Louie" and "Whitey Lewis" to the scene of the murder in front of the Metropole Hotel, in Forty-second street, near Broadway.

Despite vehement objections from Martin T. Manton, counsel for Becker, the witness was allowed to say what he overheard the gunmen say in the car.

"They told me to drive as fast as I could," said Shapiro.

"Did you overhear anything else?" asked Whitman.

Shapiro said he drove the quartet of young gunmen to Lenox avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street, where he dropped them. Then he took his car to the Cafe Boulevard, where he had a stand, left it there and went home."

WELLINGTON'S PICTURE RUINED BY MILITANT

LONDON, May 12.—The famous portrait of the Duke of Wellington in the Royal Academy was smashed by a militant suffragette today.

She wielded a hatchet with which she battered the frame and slashed the portrait itself. The woman was beaten by angry spectators who witnessed the act.

This is the second outrage of the same kind within a short time at the Royal Academy. Only recently another suffragette slashed the portrait of Henry James, painted by the famous American artist Sargent.

Extra guards had been placed on duty after the first outrage, but today's offender rushed past the guards in front of the Duke's picture, drew a hatchet from under her coat and slashed the picture, which was on exhibition in the central gallery. The guards were taken by surprise and the centre of the canvas was wrecked before they realized this situation. Then they seized the woman and dragged her from the gallery.

The woman shrieked wildly as the crowd of fashionable spectators massed about and mauled her. The guards finally got her out of the building and she was lodged in jail. At the police station she gave her name as Mary Ann Jones.

The portrait of the Duke of Wellington was one of the last masterpieces painted by the famous artist, Sir Hubert Von Herkomer, who died recently.

The convention was called to order at 10 a. m. by State Deputy Louis J. Watson. Prayer was offered by the Rev. James J. McCarthy, rector of St. William's Church, Dorchester, chaplain of the State branch. State Deputy Watson, in his report, praised the work of the officers of the State branch.

Among the most seriously scalded are Chief Engineer W. L. Portlock and First Assistant Engineer H. P. Smith.

The explosion occurred at 11:30 last night. On account of over pressure the tube sheets in one of the combustion chambers of the after starboard boiler room blew away from the boiler tubes. Scalding water and steam spurted from the breaks. Within a few minutes the boiler room was completely filled with steam.

JOHNS GIVES DETAILS OF PARIS TRIUMPH OF BOSTON OPERA STARS

By FREDERICK JOHNS.
Musical Critic Boston AMERICAN.

PARIS, May 4.—We came, we saw, and if we haven't conquered, at least we are putting up a wonderful fight and still have a chance to win.

That is the situation of the Boston Opera Company in Paris as I find it a week after the opening, and on the eve of the most important performance of the season, "Otello," with Melba, Fontana and Marcoux.

The Boston Opera is the centre of the most beautiful musical fight that has ever taken place in the French capital. The National Opera and the Comique are fighting Henry Russell, tooth and nail, and government red tape has assisted in tangling and worrying the American enterprise so that it is really a miracle that it opened successfully and on time.

The French papers were extremely apathetic during the weeks preceding the opening. Apparently nobody in Paris knew of the coming of the Boston Opera Company in combination with the Covent Garden Company to give a new kind of opera at the Theatre Champs Elysee.

Russell's arrival changed all that. I wish the Port Directors, the Chamber of Commerce and City Club and other organizations which so loyally bade the company godspeed, could see what this opera company has done to advertise Boston in Paris.

BOSTON IN BIG LETTERS.

The name is not disguised under the title Anglo-American Opera Company as was declared by some Boston papers. Boston in such big letters that the Parisians can read it without spectacles, was on all the bill boards, in the newspapers and underneath "Director Covent Garden Opera," is printed.

It is, therefore, a strictly Boston enterprise, and so far the singers have been those who are most successful in Boston.

The Opera and the Comique did not affect to notice the Champs Elysee enterprise during the early days, but after a little of the stinger of Henry Russell had been recognized, they woke up. The bills and casts of the national operas were greatly strengthened, and the result has been to benefit the subscribers of those institutions greatly.

The first blow from the National Opera was the announcement of the entire Russian ballet, the biggest Russian ballet ever seen in Paris, with no less conductors than Richard Strauss and Andre Messager, during the early weeks of May, when the Champs Elysee will be just getting into swing. The next was arranging premieres at the Opera and Comique so that they would interfere with premieres at the Champs Elysee and take the newspaper critics away.

Next Russell found that the French law required certain formalities regarding the organization of a corporation which were likely to land him in jail if he opened upon the original date before all the formalities were settled.

"Way, one day they made me sit down while they read me all the statutes of France," declares Russell. "Fortunately I was tired, soon fell asleep and didn't awaken until all was over."

BRILLIANT AUDIENCE.

Meanwhile a very important social campaign was going on. Antici, the "arts" musical agent who built the Theatre Champs Elysee, found a cabal against him so strong that the whole importance attended this opening, and he had to gradually sweep away office seats to cocottes so that they might come and give the place brilliancy.

Here the entente cordial helped the Boston enterprise. The Ambassador of France and England, cemented by the visit of the King and Queen of England, would not permit the French government to ignore this function in which the Royal Opera of Covent Garden is participating.

President Poincare announced that he would attend with his suite. The British and American ambassadors declared their intention of attending. Then the foreign colonies, English, German and American, fell in line. Many subscribed for boxes for the season. The wealthy Parisian began to be interested, and the next thing you knew the box office was busy selling tickets, something the management had not dared to hope.

The tickets for the opening cost about $7 for orchestra seats, much more than the Opera or the Comique.

A very brilliant audience assembled. It was not a sell out, but nobody had any hope of selling out. It was a magnificent assemblage which contained any quantity of titles. It was even so much better a showing than Astruc's opening last year when Weingartner conducted.

The opera was "L'Amore de Tre Re," with Melba, Marcoux and Ferrari-Fontana, and a baritone from Covent Garden named Cigada.

It was the first performance of this work in Paris. Most of the Parisian critics had never heard of Montemezzi, the composer.

A large part of the audience had come to sneer, perhaps, but they remained to display remarkable enthusiasm.

AMAZED AT BEAUTY.

The French President was unable to come at the last moment but his suite represented him. The Grand Duke Paul of Russia, the Princess Colonna, the Princess Murat, Mrs. W. E. Corey, who used to be Mabel Gilman, the actress, the Countess de Castellane and Mrs. Philip Lydig were among the notables. The Italian Ambassador was there and so were such great French artists and composers as Saint Saens, Pierne, Debussy, Emma Eames and DeGogorza and many more.

The marvelous stage settings of Urban stunned and amazed them by its unearthly beauty. Paris had never seen such scenery. Some of the critics raved about it next day. Others said the scenery was odd, or weird. It impressed them all.

Next came the singers and the acting. Edvina, a great Paris favorite, never sang so well in her life, nor did Marcoux. Ferrari-Fontana revealed himself as a magnificent artist. Cidigo was liked.

The people went away full of admiration for the show, and Russell had won the first skirmish. No longer was the Boston Opera a thing to be scoffed at. The Parisian newspaper next morning admitted that the performance was fine. There was not a dissenting voice.

However, the Paris critics would not admit for one moment that they had heard a better performance than they were accustomed to. This would of course be too much to expect. They never will admit that, and may be true but that doesn't matter.

Russell had no idea of getting such an admission from them. What the Boston Opera Company aims to do is to give Paris performances of different operas by different singers than those which are heard in Paris is accustomed. The Parisian critics have openly and frankly admitted that the Boston performances are equal to those at the Opera and Comique and that is a wonderful concession.

Melba is singing for the first time in two years in Paris, for the French Opera houses had not been induced to pay her the enormous fee she demanded. Lucien Marcoux, who since his appearance at the National Opera last year in "Jewels of the Madonna," is a prime favorite in Paris, sings Iago for the first time while Fontana will be heard for the first time as Otello.

Urban has painted new scenery for this performance which will be seen in Boston next year. Those who have seen it declare that he has surpassed himself, that it is his chef d'oeuvre.

So here we are in Paris. Boston Opera has not had the frost that Russell predicted for it. Its performances, no better than those given at home, have struck the French capital as wonderfully good and are receiving a fair amount of patronage. Nobody doubts at all that the company will be able to remain during its entire season of ten weeks.

CRIPPLE BOY RAISES FLAG AT CHELSEA

George W. Stafford, a cripple boy, living at No. 174 Broadway, Chelsea, writes to the AMERICAN that he has enrolled in the raise-the-flag movement.

"My flag has been flying and it will remain flying until the war is over," writes the boy. "I am fifteen years old and a cripple. I am the first to raise dear Old Glory in Chelsea."

MRS. G. FARLEY, No. 947 Northrope avenue, Beachmont: "Our flag has been insulted long enough. I appeal to all good Americans to remember our flag by raising it over their homes as I do mine."

HENRY L. LEIFI, No. 86 Safford street, Wollaston: "I endorse your plan for a general flag raising. I believe it teaches the patriotic spirit and love for one's country to both young and old. I have served two and a half years in the navy reserves in Company C."

HARRIE RAYMOND GOODWIN, No. 15 Deering road, Mattapan: "I am seven years old and live in Mattapan. I am visiting in Worcester and helped to hang out a flag today for the boys in blue in Mexico. I love the flag and when I am a man I want to be a soldier and wave it."

MAE WALLACE and EVA HALL, No. 268 Main street, Charlestown: "We are two eighteen-year-old girls and have shown our patriotism today by unfurling Old Glory to the breeze in honor of our country. Our husbands, F. J. Wallace and C. W. Hall, sailors on the U. S. S. North Carolina, are waiting orders to serve their country and avenge the insult offered our beloved flag. We pray that God will grant us their safe return."

CHARLES E. INMAN of No. 82 Austin street: "Your suggestion to display the national colors I consider a very good idea, and am in hearty accord with you. I have told my two little girls all about the flag and what it stands for. We raise the flag every morning."

Big Registration of Union Labor Men

PAWTUCKET, May 12.—Union labor men are getting on the voting lists in big numbers. Four hundred members of the Carmen's Union at the North Main street car barn have registered.

"It is common gossip that $15,000 a year is spent to pay the personal property tax, by a coterie of politicians, and our appeal to all union workers to register and break this un-American travesty on equal suffrage is bearing fruit," said John F. Powers, president of the A. F. of L.

GALVIN GIVES SECOND TALK ON "IRISH CRISIS"

C. O'Connell Galvin will give his second lecture on "The Irish Crisis" in Lorimer Hall, Tremont Temple, tonight. The opening one was heard by an audience which followed every word of the speaker and watched the pictures of people and places celebrated in Irish history, with constantly increasing interest.

Mr. Galvin emphasized the point that the majority of both Protestants and Catholics in Ireland favors home rule.

After tracing the early political history of the Emerald Isle Mr. Galvin brought his lecture down to the home rule movement, founded by Isaac Butt. Then, with a wealth of anecdotes and illuminating detail, he followed the development of the movement through the Parnell period and down to its present triumph.

"Outside of Belfast, where selfish, sordid interests are arrayed behind Sir Edward Carson in his attempt to block home rule, there is no feeling of intolerance on the part of the Protestants of Ireland toward their Catholic fellow-citizens. The rest of the people of the country, Catholics and Protestants alike, are overwhelmingly in favor of home rule."

1,200 Men Out of Work in Providence

PROVIDENCE, May 12.—Twelve hundred unemployed men are roaming the streets of Providence unable to find employment, according to Edward J. McGuirk, president of the Building Trades Council. Mr. McGuirk and R. A. McGarry, president of the A. F. of L., will appeal to Mayor Gainer to keep contracts within the confines of the city. "Parcmins home production," is the union demand.

MORSE FORMS ELECTRIC BARGE LINE COMPANY

NEW YORK, May 12.—Plans were announced today for the incorporation at Albany of the New York and Buffalo Steamship Company, which has been organized with a capital of $3,500,000 to operate the first line of freight vessels on the new $10,-000,000 State barge canal.

The idea of the barge canal line originated with Charles W. Morse and the details have been worked out by his son, Harry F., who was graduated from Yale in 1910, and Captain M. L. Gilbert, now president of the Southern Steamship Company, the Morse Line from Wilmington, N. C., to Baltimore.

The new line will have a fleet of thirty vessels, all driven by electricity and operated from the pilot house instead of from the engine room.

Only about $250,000 of the stock and bonds will be offered to the public, the rest having been disposed of by the Morse Securities Company. The control of the new company will remain with Mr. Morse.

The distance from New York to Buffalo by the canal is 404 miles, which will be covered by the boats in 108 hours.

'ADELE' PROVES AVALANCHE OF KISSES, MUSIC

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

As a free-for-all contest in calculation, "Adele" will go into the season's history as the one musical play that began and ended with clinched lips. It would not have been strange if a kiss or two had gone astray at the Tremont Theatre last evening, but, from a fairly comfortable seat in the third row it could be seen that not a single smack missed its mark. And it was no thin sprinkling of kisses that kept "Adele" on the soft side of love and its vagaries—it was more like a deluge.

But 'Adele" had more than its kissing to invite your attention—it had melody that rang sweetly in your ear and reminded you that the composer who knows his waltz movement is likely to turn out popular music. "Adele" swung into the waltz early in the evening, leaned heavily upon it when the osculation set in. The kissing and the music were apparently designed by the same hand, for they were a perfect fit.

CHARM IN MUSIC.

The real charm of "Adele" was its music, done by Jean Briquet. Whose composition was as fair an example of finely sustained melody as the modern school in operetta has brought out in years. It was clear that the composition was planned for popular taste, and in this respect Mr. Briquet never missed a measure. The central theme was a waltz song called "Adele," and sung by Natalie Alt, who had a pleasing voice and a particularly fetching personality. Between her vocal numbers and her kissing scrapes, Miss Alt managed to put in a rather busy evening. She appeared to be very inviting prey for the amorous attentions of Hal Forde, who did the heroic baritoning for the piece.

Following the waltz song in popular importance came "Strawberries and Cream," a charming duet by Mr. Forde and Miss Alt. It had comely, melody, and the spirit of youth tucked away among its notes. Musically, "Adele" was the most agreeable offering of the entire season.

FEATURES OF SHOW.

Typically French in its story, you found "Adele" mixing queer love affairs into its three acts, with misplaced sweethearts going the wrong courses and discovering that it led to happiness. Add to these two comic male parents—manufacturers of canned goods—and you have the chief ingredients that were employed in the entertainment.

An apoplectic old gentleman was made very real and laughable by Jules Epailly, and a stout and noisy canner of sardines gave George O'Donnell a chance to use his deep-chested voice. Nanette Flock proved a good-looking Myriane, and Harry Bradley was a male servant who supplied more philosophy than service.

If you like to see young people loving each other in the good, old-fashioned way, "Adele" will strike you as being something to be taken with a light heart and a merry soul.

There is no doubt about the music—you will find it irresistible.

ANOTHER BIG BILL IS GIVEN AT B. F. KEITH'S

There's a foolish old riddle: "Why is an elephant like an oyster?" Answer—"Because it can't climb a tree."

But not elephants like those leading the bill at Keith's Theatre this week: Mellie," "Waddy" and "Tony." This is their final stage appearance before retiring to live upon their new country estate—Franklin Park. The elephants are tremendous—literally, figuratively and then some—and they score again and again, especially with the children.

Local pictures, "Boston in Motion," open the bill pleasantly. The Grasers not only do well in dance and music, but spring a surprise at the end of their act.

John T. Murray, the "Moving Picture Man," dances, sings and talks nonsense, light and clever, a laughable and entertaining act. The Six Kirksmith Sisters are as pretty a seaette of girls as ever walked out on the Keith stage together. Their musician is vocal soloist—good and the personal charms of the six do not fail to effect.

Frederick and Minnie Brad cut "glad capers" as the bill says. The girl does handsprings, cartwheels and somersaults with unusual dexterity and the man has grotesque comedy.

Edmund Hayes & Company keep 'em laughing with their "Piano Mover" act. Lupino Lane shows some "Lunnon" comedy songs and dances. Paul Conchas, the military strong man, does startling things with cannon balls and Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Barry are a scream in "The Rube."

Plays That Remain for Coming Week

Doris Keane and "Romance" are on their two final weeks at the Wilbur Theatre.

This is the final week of "The Old Homestead" at the Boston Theatre.

Mabel and Edith Taliaferro, in "Young Wisdom," will remain only this week at the Park.

"Within the Law" is now playing its last two weeks at the Majestic Theatre.

"The Misleading Lady" continues its merry engagement at the Colonial.

"Under Cover" remains at the Plymouth, where it is now on its twenty-first week.

"Quo Vadis," in motion pictures, will remain through the present week at Tremont Temple.

Coming Attractions of Many Features

G. Hepburn Wilson, M. B., with dancers from his New York studio, will give a demonstration of modern dancing at Mechanics Hall next Saturday afternoon and evening.

What is called a "Congress of the World's Greatest Dancers" will begin a week's engagement at the Boston Theatre next Monday. Many of the most distinguished of modern dancers are announced as participants in this event.

Joan Sawyer and her own company of dancers are announced as the attraction at the Shubert, beginning Monday, May 25.

The Kinemacolor pictures, made famous by their very natural reproductions of the coronation and the Durbar, will be exhibited at Tremont Temple next week, with new subjects.

Lambs to Gambol at the Opera House

The Boston Opera House has been selected as the place where the public carnival of the Lambs shall take place on May 30 (Decoration Day). It was at the Opera House that the last public gambol was given two years ago and it proved to be one of the most notable events in the theatrical history of Boston, both from an artistic and a financial standpoint. It is promised that the program and cast this year will outshine even that of two years ago. More than one hundred actors, including almost every great male star in this country, will participate in the entertainment to which the cleverest dramatic and magazine writers have contributed, and which will be directed by the greatest masters of stage craft.

Ventriloquist at Orpheum Theatre

Trovello, a ventriloquist, who gives a novel turn to his act, was featured in the new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday. It was but one of a dozen lively things on the program. New pictures were also shown.

SOTHERN HERE IN ENGAGEMENT OF TWO WEEKS

The best news E. H. Sothern brings to Boston with him is that his present engagement at the Shubert Theatre is not to be his last.

Newspaper dispatches of a while back reported Mr. and Mrs. Sothern (Miss Marlowe) as being about to retire from the stage. It is, of course, well known to the world of theatregoers that Mrs. Sothern has been indisposed.

Pleasing news, therefore, was Mr. Sothern's before-the-curtain announcement: "The next time I appear before you I hope it may be with her."

The Sothern engagement—of two weeks only—opened with Justin Huntly McCarthy's romantic play "If I Were King."

Mr. McCarthy's play is not "new" to Boston. Mr. Sothern is not "new" in the role of Francois Villon. Newness, of itself, is not the thing which appeals to those who go to see Sothern. Last night's big audience was obviously as entertained as if this were the first presentation of the play and the first appearance of the star, after an absence of years.

Mr. Sothern was the roystering poet come to life again. For three hours his audience enjoyed to the full a week of Paris under Louis XI. His support left little to be desired.

The return of Mr. Sothern, however, brings up a question: Has George W. Wilson succeeded where so many brave men lost their lives? Does not Mr. Wilson know the exact location of the fountain of perpetual youth?

Here he was last night as young as the younger Barrymore, as lively as Willie Collier, even more convincing than in the good old days—but these younger days are also good—of the Boston Museum "stock." Old times, indeed, declare that Mr. Wilson has seldom done anything more creditable than his King Louis.

It would be ungenerous not to say a word in praise of the Abbess of Miss Alma Kruger, the Katherine of Miss Elisabeth Valentine and the Mother Villon of Miss Ina Goldsmith. For that matter, the names of thirty-one players appeared in the cast of characters. Every boy and girl of them was at all times "in the picture."

Billie Ritchie in Show at Waldron's

Billie Ritchie and the "Vanity Fair" company gave a spirited burlesque entertainment at the Casino Theatre yesterday. There were twenty girls in the company, too.

MISS GOODRICH LIKELY TO WED RUSSIAN PRINCE

By F. J. M'ISAACS.

MONTE CARLO, May 1.—Edna Goodrich, former wife of Nat Goodwin, and one of the best known American actresses, may soon be a Russian Princess, according to rumor at Monte Carlo, where she has been staying for two months past.

The beautiful American woman, who secured most of Goodwin's fortune when she decided to cut loose from him, has been one of the belles of the very dashing set at Monte Carlo. She has received attentions from nobles of all nations, but has been most seen with General Prince Varpotchsky, a fabulously rich Russian, who makes her declarations of love and devotion at the gaming tables, in the restaurants and at other important places.

Miss Goodrich, accompanied by her mother, arrived at Monte Carlo in the height of the season, secured rooms at the Hotel de Paris, said to be the most expensive hostelry in Europe, and began to cut a dash. Miss Goodrich's striking beauty was set off in the fashion of Monte Carlo by a myriad of jewels. She blazed and sparkled from head to foot. The piece de resistance of the jewelry display was a wonderful diamond necklace, which she wore with daring decolletes, set off by black velvet ribbon.

"In America, we don't think it is good form to wear many jewels," said Miss Goodrich, to an American friend, "but here, those that has 'em wears all they've got."

That is quite true. Every woman who desires to be considered dressy in Monte Carlo is obliged to deck herself out like a jewelry store show window. Miss Goodrich looks like several jewelry stores.

The Goodriches early secured admission to the exclusive Sporting Club of Monte Carlo.

Most visitors to this resort never hear of the Sporting Club. The Casino, with its gaming tables, is supposed to be the centre of interest, yet it is a fact that the smart set rarely visit the Casino. Even the more exclusive rooms of the Casino, which are only open to those who subscribe by the month, do not attract the aristocracy.

The syndicate which operates the Casino owns also the Hotel de Paris, and in the new part of the hotel has provided gorgeous apartments for the elite.

There, without leaving the hotel, the aristocratic guests and such Americans as can work in, may gamble to their heart's content.

"The Drug Terror" Shown in Motion Pictures at Globe

"The Drug Terror," a six-part motion picture drama, is preaching a powerful sermon against and against this insidious evil at the Globe Theatre this week.

The picture portrays every step in the downward path of the drug fiend, exposes the methods of the illegal dealers, the dens in which the subtle poison is used and even peddlers passing it out to school children for pennies in the guise of candy. Through it all runs a love story that ends in a broken home and wrecked lives.

The Sciological Fund of the Review of Reviews is taking this means to accomplish what oratory has failed to do in awakening the public to the rapidly growing dangers of the drug habit.

Doctors, clergymen and school teachers have written, preached and spoken in favor of its influence in showing the results of the use of cocaine and similar drugs. Among its supporters are the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, Norman Hapgood, Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.

Among the prominent players shown in the film are Joseph Kauffman, Harry Myers, William DeVoll, Bartley McCullum, Rose Marie Thebe and Mildred Gregory.

Burlesque Makes a Hit at the Gaiety

It was old-fashioned burlesque at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday. Rose Sydell's "London Belles" furnished the entertainment, which depended largely upon its pretty girls and Johnny Weber for success. Of course, the girls made good, for they were busy and attractive, and Mr. Weber kept folks in good humor with a sparkling brand of comedy.

Circus at Scollay Square Theatre

The big feature of the new bill at the Scollay Square Olympia yesterday was Blake's Circus, an animal act that astonished the day's audiences. On the dramatic side of the bill was Edwin O. Towne and company in a spirited playlet called "Easy Money." It was a brisk comedy. Other features included vaudeville, new pictures and an organ recital.

Grace Freeman Ill; "Phyllis" Delayed

On account of the illness of Miss Grace Freeman, the opening of "Phyllis," the Summer musical comedy which was to have begun a run at the Court Theatre tonight, has been postponed. As soon as Miss Freeman's condition permits an opening night will be announced.

GHOST BREAKER IS PRODUCED AT CASTLE SQUARE

Patrons of the Castle Square Theatre last night were pleased to see John Craig again appear in a leading role, that of Warren Jarvis in "The Ghost Breaker."

The events take place in Spain, and the plot brings forth romantic, comic and thrilling scenes. Mr. Craig takes the part of a young American who is touring Spain. He meets with wonderful experiences and passes a night in a haunted tower. He falls in love with Princess Maria Theresa of Castile and Aragon, who is portrayed by Doris Olsson.

Frederick Ormonde, Al Roberts, J. Merrill Morrison, Augusta Gill and Sylvia Cushman have other leading roles. Mr. Craig's appearance upon the stage at the Castle Square Theatre have been altogether too few to satisfy Boston theatregoers.

Scenic Temple.

"The Silent Witness" was the feature picture at the Scenic Temple yesterday. Other pictures and new vaudeville acts were included in the bill.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

The diving girls remained over at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday and gave a picturesque performance in the big tank.

Howard Athenaeum.

"The Tango Girls," a burlesque company, made up of smart dancers, pretty girls and effective comedians, opened the first half of the week yesterday. Several vaudeville features were included in the program.

"YANKEE LION MAY FIND IT HARD TO EAT MEXICO," SAYS DICTATOR HUERTA

U.S. BACK OF REBELS IS CHARGE

It may not be successful, even if this capital were taken. There would be shooting here, amidst the trees of this park and in general an endless guerrilla warfare outside the capital."

Our conversation took place in the park at Chapultepec in the provisional president's motor car, which is his favorite reception room.

"America," General Huerta proceeded, "may lose a great deal here. She already has lost much. She has lost the reputation for political loyalty which every great nation should maintain and defend in the eyes of the world.

"REVOLUTION AMERICAN."

"Everybody knows the system she has adopted against us. The revolution is nothing but American. It received from the United States not only arms and munitions of war, but even men.

"At Torreon whole companies of Americans in the uniform of the United States army fought with the insurgents under Villa. At Gomez, more than 200 bodies of Americans have been collected. I caused their blood stained clothing with the buttons and regimental numbers of the United States army to be preserved.

"We found among the dead some whose names are unmistakably Yankee. Large numbers of the wounded do not know our language. The auxiliary arms, hospital trains, everything has been supplied by America to the rebels.

"By what right is this iniquitous interference made?

"The Monroe Doctrine serves its purpose. It was the milk which fed the American republic when they were scarcely known, but now we are grown up. Certain forms of tuteinge cost too much, especially when they take the form of violent devastation, sanguinary aggression.

ORDERS TO DELEGATES.

"Mexican delegates have left for the mediation conference. I have given these instructions:

"Oppose most decisively any American demands which would signify the lessening of the national sovereignty of the whole of Mexico.

"I stand at my post awaiting events with a calm conscience with confidence in the ultimate triumph of the right, with a firm will to do my absolute duty to my country."

This concluded General Huerta's talk. As soon as I have his official reply to my precise questions, I shall comment upon his words and point out what value they may have in this environment of hostility, which asks for peace and would prefer everything rather than have the horror of revolution brought within the capital.

MICHELSON TELLS OF SHELLING OF TAMPICO WITH SURRENDER NEAR

By CHARLES MICHELSON.

VERA CRUZ, May 12.—Cannonading at Tampico is reported by wireless and news of its fall is expected every hour. The Rebels mounted their guns on hillocks across the lagoon north of the city. The Federal gunboat Zaragoza in the river is firing over the city in an effort to dislodge Americans who are said to be serving the Rebel guns.

General Villa is due here today, according to refugees who have arrived here. It is probable the city will have fallen before he reaches here.

The Federals have saturated the wooden ties of the bridge over the Panuco with kerosene and intend to burn it if they are unable to keep the Rebels back.

General Caballero gave ample warning and the foreign consuls got all the foreigners down the river, where the United States transport Mexico is taking them aboard.

The battleship Connecticut, the gunboat Dolphin, and the torpedo boat Jewett are off the rivers mouth.

TAMPICO REFUGEE SAYS MEXICO THINKS THE U. S. IS BLUFFING

"I'm beginning to think the eagle has become chicken-hearted," declared J. D. Williams, a refugee from Tampico, who has arrived in Boston. "The worst part of it is," he said, "the Mexicans have reached the same conclusion. When I first went to the country, no Mexican ever thought of war with us. They hated us for some reason, but they concealed their dislike. Now they are talking of war. America, they believe a nation of bluffers.

"With the gunboats in the harbor of Tampico we were treated with the old-time courtesy. Guns and good marksmanship are the only guarantees of peace in that country. Tampico was quiet and serene. Americans were at supper one night in the various hotels, principally the Southern and Victoria.

"Without any warning to us the gunboats weighed anchor and put out to sea. Twenty minutes later a brick crashed through a window and landed in the centre of the table where I was sitting. Mobs surged through the streets, shouting 'death to gringoes.' American flags were hauled down, torn, thrown into the street, and subjected to unspeakable insult.

"Americans fought empty handed against long guns and missiles often were insulted, the insulters knocked down by Americans and the Americans beaten by the mob.

JOSEPH HUSBAND, Corporal Haggerty's chum, who represents family on board Montana, and St. Patrick's Church, Cambridge, where Haggerty's funeral will be held.

HAGGERTY IS EULOGIZED BY FITZGERALD

"Who is the greatest man in Boston and Cambridge at this hour?" asked ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald in his address today before 150 young men of the Huntington School, Y. M. C. A.

"Haggerty, and more like him," answered the ex-Mayor, "because he, with others, did his duty. When this young man left his Cambridge home no one but his personal friends knew him, but now he is honored because he did his duty.

"You can't tell when you may be called, young men, to do your duty. Make yourself useful in life. Get a character and it will tell you what to do. Things that you do not care to do will be done, because it is your duty to do them.

"Don't smoke cigarettes, don't drink liquor.

"Fortify yourself against these temptations and when you get into matured life, if you have escaped these habits you will be thankful."

Astors Put Off Trip to Europe

PROVIDENCE, May 12.—Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor have deferred their departure for Europe for the present, and will probably not sail before late in June. They are having Fernciiff, their estate at Rhinebeck on the Hudson, where they are at present, made ready for a long stay, and in view of this are having the indoor tennis courts opened.

MONTANA, FUNERAL SHIP, DELAYED BY FOG

vicinity will follow the example of the Blake people.

THREE HEROES ABOARD.

The three New England patriots whose bodies are being transported here on the Montana are:

Daniel Haggerty of Cambridge, corporal of marines.

Rufus Percy of Concord, N. H., marine.

Walter L. Watson of Eastham, seaman.

Every detail for the reception of the bodies has been carefully arranged and all New England will unite in the final honors to the martyrs for the flag.

Whether the Montana docks today or tomorrow, the procedure at the navy yard will be the same. Commandant DeWitt Coffman, with all the other yard officers and the officers of the naval craft now lying at the yard, will be on the pier in full uniform to receive all that remains of Coporal Haggerty and Seamen Percy and Watson.

NAVY YARD'S TRIBUTE.

With these officers will be a guard of honor of both marines and sailors. There is to be no further ceremony when the bodies are landed—no service, no bugle calls, no salute. The naval regulations do not call for even what is to be done, for, so far as their presence at the navy yard is concerned, the bodies of the young men must be regarded as merely in transit. But Commandant Coffman has chosen to pay the tribute to the bodies of the dead men of the service by standing, with his associates and his guard of honor, at attention as the caskets are borne ashore.

The bodies will be sent from the navy yard to their respective stations without delay. That of Corporal Haggerty will be delivered at the yard to the undertaker who is authorized to receive it.

Aboard the Montana, as escort to Haggerty's body, is his friend and former "bunkie" on the cruiser Chester and the battleship Utah, Joseph A. Husband. This friend is now electrician and wireless operator on the ship that is bearing him and the body of his best chum in the service to Boston. Husband will go to Cambridge with the body.

GUARDS OF HONOR.

The body of Seaman Watson will be carried to the South Station and put aboard the train for Orleans. It will be transported from the yard to the railroad station in a navy yard ambulance and accompanied by a guard of honor of six sailors. These men will remain at Orleans and guard the body until it is laid at rest in the little cemetery that overlooks the sea.

The body of Seaman Percy will be taken in another ambulance to the North Station, with a guard of honor of six seamen, and there turned over to the express company responsible for its transportation to Concord, N. H., where a sorrowing mother awaits its arrival.

As no request for an escort of naval men has been received by the department, the guard of honor will not accompany the body to the New Hampshire capital, but officers of the Boston corps of the Salvation Army will be at the station and will go on the train with the body to Concord. Had the navy department been requested to do so, the sailors would have stayed by the body until its burial.

2,000 GUARD BODY.

It has been arranged that no one shall intrude on the family of the dead during the twenty-four hours Haggerty's body lies in his old home. While all Boston and New England extends its sympathy to Mr. Haggerty and to the dead man's brothers and sisters, that sympathy will be best shown by observing the family's desire to be alone.

When the body is taken to the Armory to lie in state, over 2,000 soldiers and sailors will be drawn up in the big building, and will stand at attention. Till late at night, the body will be viewed by thousands of Cambridge and Boston men and women, and little children, come to learn their kill lesson of patriotism and what it means—both in death and in honor.

At 9 on the funeral day, the cortege will emerge from the Armory and go to St. Patrick's Church. Fully 5,000 men will march in this memorial procession. The route will be: Along the Esplanade, Wadsworth street, Kendal square, Third street, Cambridge street, Berkshire street and then to the church.

Captain Wilson of the Coast Artillery and Lieutenant Daniels of the marines, representing Commandant Coffman of the Navy Yard, have arranged all details of the funeral. At City Hall, 5,000 school children will see the cortege pass, and salute it with flags. These children tomorrow will have patriotic exercises in their schools, and at the time of the funeral the schools, like the business houses and city offices, will suspend.

BURIAL IN HONOR LOT.

The body of Haggerty is to be laid in an "honor lot" in Cambridge Cemetery, in the shadow of the Soldiers and Sailors Monument.

When the funeral cortege comes there, the ship's band of the battleship Rhode Island will play the dirge always played at naval funerals.

The Lotus Male Quartette will sing.

The Rev. Father John Ryan of St. Paul's Church will deliver an oration on "Patriotism."

The band will play "Nearer My God to Thee," while his fellow marines lift Haggerty's body from the caisson and lower it to its final resting place.

Over the open grave the firing squad will fire its last volley of farewell; and then as the clods begin to fall, the bugler will blow the notes of "Taps"—the farewell to the dead.

Probe Death of Shepperd in London

LONDON, May 12.—The Probate Court today resumed inquiry into the death of Charles Sheppard of Ansonia, Ct., who disappeared in December, 1909. The Court last year adjudged Sheppard legally dead and appointed his daughter Frances of Bridgeport administrator of his estate. Sheppard became entitled to a large English estate left by a relative since his disappearance.

MASSACHUSETTS WILL FURNISH HER FULL QUOTA OF MILITIA

HEAVEY BRINGS WORD TO GOVERNOR WALSH

In the event of a call for State troops by the War Department, Massachusetts will be called upon to furnish its quota on a pro rata population basis, according to word brought to Governor Walsh by Major John W. Heavy, U. S. A., who has just returned from Washington where he has been in conference with officials of the War Department under orders from the Governor.

This, says the Governor, effectually disposes of the talk that Massachusetts is to be ignored when a call comes for troops. Under the military law the War Department has no alternative, but to raise the desired number of men from all of the States on a population basis.

The belief is unanimous upon the part of War Department officials, according to Major Heavey, that orders will be issued to call the State troops in each of the States into mobilization camps and later into concentration camps, where they will be readily available in the event of a call for troops.

MILITIA CALL FIRST.

The militia of the several States, according to the Governor, will be asked to make up the desired number above the regular forces of the United States and the volunteer forces will not be drafted into service until the militia proves inadequate to the demand for additional troops.

The Governor and Major Heavey were closeted this morning for several hours. During his stay in Washington Major Heavey was in conferences with Secretary of War Garrison, Brigadier-General Arthur L. Mills, chief of the militia division, and other officers of the War Department. The matter of shoes, overcoats and other equipments for the Massachusetts militia was gone over thoroughly.

Brigadier-General William B. Emery, in charge of the quartermaster's department of Massachusetts, said today:

READY FOR FIELD.

"The Massachusetts militia organizations are ready to take the field with dispatch if the call comes, but personally I think Huerta will be a dead man before June 1 and there will not be much more fuss. I think Uncle Sam will have to sit tight down there though.

"Nothing approaching a summons has yet been received in Massachusetts to my knowledge. Nobody can tell what may develop. The only thing our troops need is shoes. We will have to have 8,000 pairs and I think they will be on hand soon.

"We will not furnish the overcoats because we haven't got the money for them. That is an accessory that will have to be provided by the national government.

"We can furnish troops to the country on a peace strength at short notice. The accoutrement would be suitable for tropical service, but if Uncle Sam wanted lighter outfits in a hot climate the national government will have to stand the expense.

"I have just ordered 600,000 rounds of ammunition for rifle practice. This is not as a result of the war scare. It is the regular supply."

FUNSTON STRENGTHENS WATERWORKS GUARD

WASHINGTON, May 12.—General Funston reported to the War Department today that he had so strengthened his outposts at Vera Cruz, particularly at the waterworks, that any serious attack from the Federals would not cut off the water supply. He stated that even should the conduit be cut, he has so placed the engineer battalion as to repair any injury almost immediately.

No movements of Federal troops are reported in the immediate vicinity of the American outposts. Mail sent from and to Mexico City, Funston stated, had been held just beyond the break in the railroad by General Maas. There are about 200 sacks intended for delivery in Vera Cruz.

The dispatch stated that there is no cause for alarm in the local situation. Funston believes the American troops are so well entrenched that any Mexican attack could be repulsed.

SILLIMAN'S RELEASE DEMANDED BY BRYAN

By W. J. MADDOX,
Staff Correspondent of the American at the State Department.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Ominous clouds today overcast the prospects of mediation in the Mexican embroglio as official Washington waited to see whether General Huerta would keep his promise to free John R. Silliman, American vice-consul, imprisoned at Soltillo.

If Huerta does not comply with the emphatic demand made by Secretary of State Bryan that the American official be set at liberty at once, it is believed the only recourse of the United States will be to send troops across the Rio Grande.

Following Secretary Bryan's implied ultimatum the administration was informed that Silliman would be placed in the custody of the Brazilian Minister at Mexico City and safely conducted out of the country. But the Mexican dictator's actions preliminary to compliance thus far have been so annoying to government officials that fear still is entertained that the Silliman incident is not yet closed.

CANADA IS HOPEFUL.

W. W. Canada, United States consul at Vera Cruz, reports that he has been advised that Silliman is to be released at once by Huerta's orders. He expects that Silliman will be allowed to come to Vera Cruz as soon as he reaches Mexico City.

Another phase of the situation which adds to the mediation tangle is the representations which the Navy Department is prepared to make to the mediators regarding the lighthouses on the coast of Mexico.

It is understood the Navy Department will ask the mediators to countenance the landing of marines or bluejackets at a dozen points on the west coast of Mexico to take possession of the lighthouses and maintain the beacons which were extinguished by Huerta's orders in an evident attempt to hamper the operations of the American fleet.

Rear Admiral Badger, at Tampico, the subject of Huerta's most recent protest to the mediators, is not "occupied" by the navy, according to Acting Secretary Roosevelt. The navy has found it necessary, however, to place a crew in the lighthouse to maintain the light.

TO MAN LIGHTHOUSES.

Similar action is contemplated in regard to every other Mexican lighthouse that has become dark.

The reports of Constitutionalist successes at Tampico continue to come here, although official Washington still is without definite information regarding the fighting.

General Funston has informed the War Department that the Huertistas are making a base at Puebla, midway between Vera Cruz and Mexico City with the evident intention of resisting an American advance at that point. It is also rumored here that Huerta is preparing to remove his government to that place.

PRIVATE PARKS SHOT AND HIS BODY BURNED, SAYS HARDING DAVIS

VERA CRUZ, May 12.—War Correspondents Medill McCormick of Chicago and Richard Harding Davis came today on a French steamer from Puerto Mexico having been ordered out of the capital by Huerta. They went from Mexico to Puerto Mexico, then came here by boat.

Davis claims to have information that Samuel Parks, the private of the Twenty-eighth regiment, who disappeared near the Tejar water works, had been captured by Mexicans, shot and his body burned.

WOUNDED ON SOLACE CHEERED BY BATTLE

By RUFUS F. ZOGBAUM.
Staff correspondent of the American with the United States fleet at Vera Cruz.

U. S. FLAGSHIP ARKANSAS, off Vera Cruz (via Galveston), May 11.—"Get your swords on! Get your swords on!"

Merrily and quick; mellow notes of the bugle call to quarters sound throughout the ship, and officers and men gather at their stations.

The deck are scrubbed clean, bright work shining and the crew, in spotless white mustering clothes, stands silently in ranks awaiting the regular weekly inspection by the captain.

There is not a sign to show that among them are many of the brave fellows somewhat stained and grimy —the battle light in their eyes still undimmed—that you saw ashore there only a day or two ago holding fast to what they had won until relieved from their posts by their comrades of the army.

ABOARD THE SOLACE.

Quietly the other vessels of the fleet lie at anchor, the white lines of the men on their decks, the many-starred bluejackets at the boat and colors at the stern. Somewhat closer inshore than the big fighters there is one ship lying whose white hull with the broad green stripe stands out conspicuously. At her main truck the red cross is flying.

She is the hospital ship Solace. In the shelter of her capacious decks lie the wounded, part of the aftermath of the hard fighting at the occupation of Vera Cruz. They find all the solicitous, skilful care, all the sympathy and kindness her name implies.

A few of the less badly hurt are standing or sitting upon the edges of their beds, some even of those severely wounded are half sitting, half reclining in their bunks. Other poor fellows lie quiet, almost motionless.

One of them looks up with a smile as I pass at the side of his cot.

"And where did they get you?" I asked. In mute reply he raises and turns back the sheet, revealing the bandaged stump of one leg. "But I can do a lot of kicking with the other," he says, grinning cheerfully.

Indeed, strange as it may seem, an atmosphere of cheerfulness, not the depression one would naturally expect to find, appears to pervade the place.

There are even sounds of laughter —loud, rough laughter of the forecastle, such as you may hear almost any pleasant night at sea.

In the next row of cots a brawny fellow on his back, a leg held rigid in splints, lies between two others, both badly wounded men.

One reaches up to the bottom of the cot above him and brings out from some place in the ticking a small lump of steel jacketed metal.

"Ain't that a nice thing to have inside you?" he asks.

His neighbor on the other side wonders at the silvery wood the doctor had taken from the long gash in his side.

"Shot with a wood bullet!" the humorist cries, whereat all hands laugh again.

With his legs dangling over the side of one of the upper bunks a yellow-haired lump of a patient, painfully, laboriously scrawling some lines with a pencil on a sheet of paper spread on a shelf-like table resting on the edge of his berth.

He can scarcely move his fingers —he has a gunshot wound in the upper arm—but sticks manfully to his work.

WOUNDED, REJECTS HELP.

"Can't I do that for you," I ask.

"No, sir, thank you. I'd be glad to have you but you see this here's private. Besides she might think me worse hurt than I am if she got a letter from me in some one else's handwriting," and his pale face grew pink with the flush that spread over it.

Side by side two men lie in one corner of the ward, marine and bluejacket.

"Marines and bluejackets aren't supposed to pull together very well, but we've become good pals," says one, "since we've been lying here together."

Both men are pretty badly hurt, the soldier in the body, the sailor in the legs. They fell close to each other in the fight.

"Do you think the flag will ever come down, sir?" asks the marine. "Anyway, I did something to put it there."

This is the spirit of all the brave fellows, wounded and those who died, true to their duty in this peace lovers' war, where men have been maimed and killed in a "war which is not war."

GEN. NAVARETTE NOW COMMANDS MEXICANS

By HARRY H. DUNN.
Special Staff Correspondent of the American.

VERA CRUZ, May 12.—General Rubio Navarette, one of the foremost military men in the service of the Mexican government, has taken charge of the Federal troops around Vera Cruz, and is making aggressive plans to block any forward movement of the Americans.

General Navarette is a former companion in arms of General Victoriano Huerta. Not only is he a graduate of the Chapultepec military academy, but his education in warfare was polished off with a term in the French army.

"Navarette is the man we have got to look out for," said Brigadier-General Frederick Funston, the American commander-in-chief, today, as he scanned a big military map on the wall of his headquarters, showing the disposition of Mexican troops on the three inland sides of the city.

Although General Gustavo Maas is supposed to be in command of the Mexican Federals stationed west of Vera Cruz, he has given way to his more energetic and aggressive division commander. Maas will likely be recalled to Mexico City.

Daily tours of inspection are made among the Mexican outposts by Navarette, who is a wiry, alert man, with a keen military manner and snapping black eyes. He has planted artillery behind screens of chaparral and has dug secret trenches along the ridges of sandy hills, but these would be offset by the extensive precautions taken by the American engineers.

All of the country west of Vera Cruz has been mapped out and some of it cleared of scrub. Clumps of trees have been marked for the purpose of finding artillery ranges and undulations of the ground have been designated for barricades. Upon the wall of General Funston's headquarters hangs a huge map dotted with little paper flags, each having a topographical meaning.

Lieutenant Bellinger of the signal corps reported that General Navarette has 500 men at Santa Fe on the railway line fifteen miles inland and three hundred more at Los Bajos, six miles beyond the first gap in the railway line west of Vera Cruz. This is the closest Mexican outpost on the West.

THIS WOMAN'S SICKNESS

Quickly Yielded to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Baltimore, Md.—"I am more than glad to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I suffered dreadful pains and was very irregular. I became alarmed and sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly until I was without a cramp or pain and felt like another person, and it has now been six months since I took any medicine at all. I hope my little note will assist you in helping other women. I now feel perfectly well and in the best of health."—MRS. AUGUST F. KOENDER, 1632 Hollins Street, Baltimore, Md.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail.

ROSELTH BREED WILL STAR IN COMING PLAY

MARIAN S. LOVERING BRIDE TODAY, IN ST. CECILIA'S, OF DR. REGGIO

Among the interesting girls who are to take part in the performance to be given by the Daughters of the American Revolution in the Peace Play at Copley Hall, Friday evening and Saturday afternoon is Miss Roselth Knapp Breed of No. 350 Commonwealth avenue. Miss Breed is a decidedly clever girl and has shown her talents and accomplishments on many occasions. Her appearance in "The Right Way," which was written by Mrs. H. Stannard May of Brookline and coached by Miss Marie Ware Laughton, is expected to prove an interesting feature of the performance.

* * *

An interesting wedding today is that of Miss Marian S. Lovering and Dr. William Reggio, which takes place in the vestry of St. Cecilia's Church, and is attended by only the immediate families. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Lovering of Commonwealth avenue and she is a member of the Vincent and other popular clubs. A reception follows at the Lovering home.

The young couple will make their home next Winter at No. 6 Fairfield street, which was a wedding gift from the bride's father. Dr. Reggio is a brother of A. Nichola Reggio, who married Claire Means, about two years ago.

Miss Lovering's brothers are Charles T. Lovering, Jr., who married Nellie Lyman, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lyman. Joseph Lovering of Milton, whose wife was formerly Elsie Bacon, and Richard Sears Lovering, who married Mollie Elliott. Miss Lovering is a cousin of the Misses Eleanora, Phyllis and Miriam Sears. Mrs. Bayard Warren, Alfred S. Dabney, Mrs. Henry Cannon Clark and Mrs. Philip Stockton.

* * *

Another wedding of interest today is that of John F. Malley, collector of internal revenue, to Miss Marion L. Coogan, a society girl of Pittsfield. The wedding takes place at St. Joseph's Church. Miss Louise I. Coogan, a sister of the bride, will be the bride's only attendant. The groom's brother, Thomas Malley, is best man.

Mrs. John L. Barry of No. 65 Taintor street, Medford, announces the engagement of her sister, Katherine Barry, to D. Henry Donovan, also of Medford, but formerly of Oakland, Cal.

* * *

Among well-known Bostonians just returned from New York, where they went to attend the weddings of Miss Abbe and Dr. Lander, are Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Little, Mrs. Macfarland, Miss Josephine Barrett, Miss Josephine Tauck, Father Finnigan, A. Paul Keith and Mr. Geraudi.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Eliot Guild of Boston are among the arrivals at Lenox. Miss Julia Hunnewell of Boston is a guest in Lenox at Mr. and Mrs. George Baty Blake at their estate there.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee, who have been guests for several days of friends in Stockbridge, have returned to Faulkner Farm.

Mrs. Uriel H. Crocker of Bay State road, who spent the Winter abroad, passing much of her time in Switzerland and France, has just returned. Mrs. Crocker will be but a short time at her Bay State road home before going to Bar Harbor, to open her estate, "Ufferheim," for the season.

Makes Hairy Growths Vanish From the Skin

(Aids to Beauty)

It is now not an easy matter to banish hair not wanted that no swoop need longer tolerate superfluous growths on chin, lip or cheek. A thick paste made with a little powdered delatone and water and spread on the hairy surface 2 minutes, then rubbed off, takes the hair with it, and after it is washed to remove the remaining delatone it will be free from spot or blemish. To avoid disappointment, get the delatone in an original package.

The finest little gasoline contract that has ever been consummated is that entered into by an oil company on the one hand and the city of Boston on the other. This contract provides that the oil company shall furnish a year's supply of gasoline to the city of Boston at a maximum of fourteen cents a gallon, with a guarantee that it shall always be one cent less per gallon than the price quoted by any of its competitors. In addition to this clause there is another one providing for a ten per cent cash discount.

The city of Boston has a fleet of seventy-eight gasoline cars, which perhaps accounts for the particularly attractive figures quoted the city. There are, however, several concerns in Boston who use fully as much, if not more, gas per year than will the city, with its fleet, and they are naturally asking why they should not be able to procure gasoline on this same basis.

During the recent Franklin economy test, Otto Lawton of Boston secured a third largest mileage on one gallon of gas. The record was secured by the Milwaukee dealer who travelled 51.2 miles. The second high mark was secured by the agent in Cumberland, Md., he travelling 50.9 miles, while Otto Lawton drove 49.8 miles.

New England Manager Ralph E. Coburn of the Maxwell Company makes the interesting announcement that the Maxwell machines to do battle in the coming Indianapolis race will be devoid of a fly-wheel. Instead there will be used a counterbalance crank shaft which makes the fly-wheel unnecessary. The weight of each counterbalance equals that of the lower half of the corresponding connecting rod and crankpin, so that all the rotating forces are perfectly balanced.

BALANCE SHEET SHOWS MARGIN FOR AMERICA

By B. C. FORBES.

On behalf of the Boston AMERICAN and other Hearst publications—which cover the United States and have invaded Europe—I have been trying to compile America's annual balance sheet. We show a generous balance of merchandise exports every year, but what our adverse "invisible balance" approximates, no human being can tell. Estimates of it range from $50,000,000 to $2,000,000,000.

* * *

I sent letters to every important banking firm and institution, express company, insurance company, steamship company, etc., asking them to give me, in strictest confidence, the amount of their annual net payments to foreigners. A full response would have thrown light on a subject of tremendous importance about which we are all in complete ignorance. Compensative returns would have permitted of a compilation of incalculable value.

* * *

I regret to have to announce, however, that, owing to the attitude taken by the majority of New York banking concerns, no adequate figures can be presented.

* * *

New York showed its usual provincialism.

* * *

The response from Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, the Pacific Coast and the South was most gratifying. Many bankers supplemented their figures with letters cordially approving the movement and expressing the hope that, for the first time in the nation's history, a trustworthy compilation in the nature of an annual balance sheet would be prepared.

* * *

The insurance, express and steamship companies also lent their aid by forwarding their returns.

* * *

But, with a few shining exceptions, the New York bankers, banks and trust companies failed to rise to the occasion. The average New York banker moves in a narrow, hallow groove. He lacks the breadth, the warmth and the magnanimity of his Western and Southern brethren. Petty jealousies abound in the Wall Street district. Each little tuppenny banker is afraid lest a rival learn what he is doing.

* * *

Mighty New York bankers can claim to be citizens of the world. With rare exceptions they cannot rise above their metallic transactions.

* * *

"Our business is none of the public's business," is their puerile, short-sighted attitude.

* * *

Who lays down the rules for doing business these days? Is it not the public?

* * *

Fortunately New York does have a sprinkling of broad-gauge bankers, especially among the private firms. A few local, national and State bankers are also alive to where they and their affairs fit into the scheme of things and have acumen enough to take the public into their confidence.

* * *

Supplementing the useful communications already printed, dealing with the liquidation of American securities held by foreign firms during the last two years, I am peculiarly glad to be able to present this succinct, illuminating statement from the head of one of America's most respected, old-fashioned international banking firms. Isaac N. Seligman, of J. & W. Seligman & Co. of New York:

My Dear Mr. Forbes—In reply to your letter of April 22, asking me to give you a rough estimate as to the amount of American securities that have been liquidated by Europe in our market during the past two years, I would say that it is, of course, difficult to state the amount with any degree of accuracy.

In my opinion, the amount is in the neighborhood of $800,000,000 to $1000,000,000.

With the exception of some short-time railroad notes and some very high-class railroad bonds, practically no shares to any extent have been placed upon the European market, and the amount of securities that have been returned is very large.

Excepting Canadian Pacific, Europe has at no time not sold on balance any large amounts, and it is my impression that European liquidation, unless conditions become a great deal worse, which is unlikely, has ceased for the present.

In case of any heavy declines in our market, and still easy money abroad, and more favorable crop conditions on this side, and a disposition on the part of the Interstate Commerce Commission and officials at Washington to treat the railroads fairly and put a stop to further attacks on capital, I think that we may expect Europe to become more of a purchaser than a seller during next year. Very truly yours,

ISAAC N. SELIGMAN.

* * *

Leopold Newborg, of Newborg & Co., the prominent Stock Exchange and banking firm which has extensive European connections, writes:

Unquestionably the European investors have liquidated a large amount of their American securities in the past two years. I would judge a conservative estimate would be 40 per cent. of their holdings. To venture any estimate of the possible amount in dollars would be such a conjecture that I would hardly undertake to make it.

Regarding the future outlook, I am optimistic. I believe the next decided turn will be toward higher prices.

Other replies will be given later, after which it will be possible to draw a helpful general conclusion as to the actual status.

COUNCIL DECIDES ONLY 5-YEAR GAS CONTRACT WILL BE CONSIDERED

The contract to supply Boston with gas must be redrawn not merely to remove the objections raised by the Finance Commission, as to form, but also for only a five-year term with more advantageous prices, before it meets the approval of the City Council.

This was clearly brought out in the discussion about the contract opened by Councillor Ballantyne in the executive session of the Council. The discussion was concluded with a vote to invite the officials of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, and Louis K. Rourke, Commissioner of Public Works, to meet the members of the City Council in a conference with a view to changing those objectionable clauses in the contract and arranging more reasonable prices, and for only a five-year term.

It had been brought to the attention of the executive committee that the Mayor had already instructed Mr Rourke to see if the gas company could meet the objections of the Finance Commission to the contract, which he believed that the company was willing to do.

"TIME FOR REDUCTION."

Councillor Ballantyne opened the discussion of the gas contract near the close of the executive session. "Before we adjourn," he said, "I think we should express ourselves in some way as favoring the recommendations of the Finance Commission. Personally, I am opposed to a ten-year contract for gas. I think the city should not be tied up to a gas contract for more than five years, anyway.

"As I understand it, the officials of the gas company have expressed themselves as willing to offer almost as cheap a price for only a five-year contract. Their first price was only a dollar more—this was later raised to $1.40.

"I think if Commissioner Rourke could sit down here, before us, with the gas company officials, it would be possible to thresh out this whole matter and come to some reasonable conclusion. I hope that the Council will vote a resolution, asking Mr. Rourke to confer with the company officials here.

"It is time we got somewhere—it is time we got these people to reduce their prices."

Councillor Coulthurst objected to meeting the gas people, saying: "I understand Mr. Rourke, Commissioner of Public Works, recommends that the gas lighting be done away with and the lighting be done entirely by electricity. With the magnetite lamp which is certain to reach a high state of development within three years, it is possible the Edison people can light our streets much more effectively and much cheaper, and if we tie up with the gas company before we have threshed out this phase of the matter with the electric company, we may lose considerable advantage.

"But if we do meet the gas officials here," explained Councillor Coleman, in support of Councillor Ballantyne's suggestion, "we can go over the matter with them tentatively. We can make a tentative trade with the gas company, without binding ourselves at all.

LIKE BUSINESS DEAL.

"Then with a tentative trade made, our position in demanding better prices from the Edison Company will be so much strengthened. It will help us to make a trade with the Edison people. That is the way you would put through a business deal, and I am sure it would be effective here."

Councillor Watson objected. "I understand that the Finance Commission made four serious objections to the present contract. If these objections are sustained by us, then it will mean that an entirely new contract must be drawn up, readvertised, and all the other preliminaries gone through just as if there had been no contract discussed at all. It seems to me that in that case it is necessary for us only to reject this contract as a contract."

Councillor Coleman, however, did not take kindly to so summary a disposal of the present contract. "I think," he said, "that if we can get together here and talk the thing over with the company, even if what Mr. Watson says is eventually necessary, then in the new contract, it will be possible to obviate all the difficulties that have been found with the present one, and still we need not tie ourselves up to accepting the result of the conference as anything more than a tentative reaching after common ground."

Councillor Coulthurst still objected to such a conference. "Isn't it dangerous," he asked, "for us to meet the gas officials here, without first having made up our minds? I know I am not ready to confer with them. In my present state of mind, they might put up an argument, and seem to come to terms, and I would meet them half way. I do not think that is the way to meet them."

ROURKE CALLED IN.

Councillor Ballantyne again urged a conference. He said:

"We all know that this present contract will not be approved. Some contract may be approved. It will help if a new contract is fully understood by us. Then again the conference here would be all in the open."

It was resolved to invite Rourke and the officials to come before the City Council and have the conference.

After the City Council had again convened, a report of the executive committee, held over from last week, was accepted and passed, calling the commissioners of the park and recreation departments to inform the council how many feet of conduit, built by the city, and used by the Edison Company, there is in the parks, and how much the Edison Company pays for their use, if anything. This order had been suggested by Councillor Watson in the executive session a week ago.

Councillor Coulthurst secured the adoption of an order requesting the Chamber of Commerce to submit to the City Council any supplementary information on the electric contract, especially in regard to arc and tungsten lamps and the form of an acceptable electric lighting contract.

NO. 11

ATTENTION, MAYOR CURLEY!

If you had made as good a contract for the people of Boston with the Electric Light Company as the city of Colorado Springs, Colorado, made with its Electric Light Company, Boston would save about nine hundred sixty-eight thousand dollars during the period of the contract which you wish to foist upon Boston. This great sum saved by the city would give more than ONE THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED AND NINETY WORKMEN A FULL YEAR'S EMPLOYMENT.

Would you have been elected Mayor, Mr. Curley, if you had told the people of Boston that you considered the twelve per cent. dividends of the Edison Electric Light Company more sacred than the bread and butter of the clerks, the laborers, the police, the firemen, the nurses, the matrons employed by the city, whom you have reduced or discharged, or more sacred than the pleasure and health which the citizens obtain from their parks and public buildings, which your FALSE economy tends to cripple?

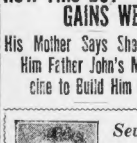
HOW THIS BOY GAINS WEIGHT

His Mother Says She Gives Him Father John's Medicine to Build Him Up



Seven Year-Old Clifford Mercier

Read His Story

During a recent interview, Mr. Joseph Mercier of 253 Walker street, Lowell, Mass., said to the writer: "My little boy, Clifford, now seven years old has taken Father John's Medicine whenever he had a cold or cough, ever since he was two years old, and it has never failed to give good results. We find that the medicine stops the wheezing, and he used to cough badly at night and he does not do it when we give him Father John's Medicine. We believe that Father John's Medicine gives him increased weight and strength, and we know that while taking it he always gains in weight. We would not be without it in the house, and strongly recommend Father John's Medicine to mothers of children who are weak and run down.

The only train service now furnished to Hopkinton is one mixed train.

Newsboy Fined; Counsel Appeals

Lewis Tekulsky, twenty-four, of No. 74 Prescott street, East Boston, was haled into court today for disturbing the peace and for selling papers in Maverick square without a permit. Judge Barnes found him guilty on both counts and fined the cases. "No, sir," cried Councilor Timothy Buckley, the boy's attorney. "We want fines imposed, so we can carry this up to the Superior Court for a test case." Accordingly Tekulsky was fined $5 on each count, and on appeal was held in $50.

No More Desire For Tobacco

Arthur Krouse is a locomotive fireman who had been using tobacco since he was a boy. About two years ago he began to have spells of illness. His memory was getting very bad and his eyes bothered him a good deal. He had tried in vain to conquer the habit until he got a certain book, and now he is freed from the thraldom of tobacco and his health is wonderfully improved. Anyone who desires to read the book can obtain it absolutely free by writing to Edward J. Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., 854 Z, New York City. It tells how the habit of smoking, chewing or snuff taking can be conquered in three days.

HARVARD NINE TACKLES FORDHAM PLAYERS IN BIG DIAMOND BATTLE

HUB BOY PLANS NEW INVASION OF ANTIPODES

By JACK CONWAY.

Joe Levins, the Boston boy who piloted Eddie McGoorty in his Australian ring campaign, is today planning a new invasion of the land of the Southern cross. Levins has just returned from a successful trip to Australia, but he says that he will probably take three American boxers to the land of the kangaroo in the Fall.

Joe would have remained in Australia with McGoorty if it were not for his baseball interest in New York, which require his attention during the Spring and Summer months. The boy manager called at this office today and gave some interesting facts about the boxing game in Australia and also other sporting topics. Joe said:

"I consider Australia the greatest sporting country in the world. The boxing game, in particular, is in a very flourishing condition in the Antipodes. Boxing is every bit as popular in Australia as baseball is in the United States. It is the national pastime of the country and is patronized by the rich and poor alike.

BOYS TAUGHT TO BOX.

"The Australian youths are trained in the manly art of self-defence. They are taught the fine points of the glove game and do not depend upon brute strength in order to win their contests. The manlers are not very popular with the "fans" in Australia, who prefer to watch two fast shifty gloved men in action. "Eddie McGoorty has been very successful in his contests in Australia. When we left this country we were signed for three bouts and were assured of doing well financially. Eddie's first battle was with Dave Smith, the Australian middleweight and heavyweight champion, and you all know how the Oshkosh boy handed a dream punch in the first round.

"Eddie fought Smith again, and in that bout scored a knockout in the tenth session. He stopped Jerry Jerome in seven rounds, while he won decisions over Pat Bradley and Jeff Smith in twenty-round encounters.

"I consider Jeff Smith a great fighter, and he is sure to make a name for himself within the hemropes. He hails from New Jersey and only weighs 152 pounds. He is a fine boxer and a straight, hard puncher.

LOST TO M'GOORTY.

"Smith gave McGoorty a great fight and the crowd was not decided when Eddie was awarded the decision. Personally I thought that Eddie had the best of the going, but the margin in his favor was only a small one.

"McGoorty has outgrown the middleweight division and the best weight he can make is 160 pounds at 2 o'clock. He does his best work when performing above this notch, and when he returns to this country he will probably start fighting the "white hopes."

"The white heavyweights are not a very classy bunch of boxers, and I do not believe that McGoorty would experience much trouble in disposing of the majority of them. I would like to match Eddie with "Gunboat" Smith and I feel confident that he would be able to conquer Jim Buckley's husky fighter.

"YOUNG SAYLOR BOXING WELL."

"One of the chief features of the boxing game in Australia has been the fine work of "Young" Saylor, the Indianapolis lightweight. He has won five battles by knockouts. His record is as follows: Al Morey, fourteen rounds; Hughie McGeegan, eleven rounds; Herb McCoy, eighteen rounds; Mat Williams, two rounds and Tom McCormick, ten rounds.

"Meheegan is the best lightweight in Australia, and Saylor is the first boxer who ever knocked him out. McCoy is another star Australian, 133-pound performer, who made a showing in the Antipodes tried to match him with Willie Ritchie."

Moha Beats Mantell in 10-Round Bout

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 12.—Frank Mantell, of Providence, was defeated by Bob Moha, the Milwaukee cavalryman, in ten rounds. Mantell saved himself from a knockout by constant covering and clinching.

Freddie Couture of Lawrence was knocked out by "Peanuts" Schebert of Rock Island in 59 seconds.

Herman Beats Simon.

NEW ORLEANS, May 12.—Kid "Pete" Herman defeated Arthur Simon so decisively here that Promoter Torrich of the Orleans A. C. said he would offer inducements to Johnny Coulon, the bantam champion, to meet Herman here within the next few months.

Phil Virgets shaded Joe Moran in the 10th round semi-final and Lori won from Bertucci in the six-round opener.

Two Bouts in New York.

NEW YORK, May 12.—Bobby Reynolds of Philadelphia, will box in his ten-round bout with Joe Mooney of this city at the Stadium A. C. outpointed his adversary in every round. Young Kansas of Buffalo and a slight lead over Harry Conlon in the other bout.

Foul Wins for Brock.

MEMPHIS, May 12.—Mike Brock of Cleveland defeated Gene Delmont of Memphis in the fourth round of their bout here on a foul.

Brennan and Clark Draw.

WHEELING, W. Va., May 12.—K. O. Brennan of Buffalo and Grant "Kid" Clark of Columbus fought a 10-round draw before the Bridgeport A. C. here.

Quick K. O. for Coffey.

PHILADELPHIA, May 12.—Before the bell ended the first round Jim Coffey tucked away one fat and heavy soldier Kerns with a right hook to the chin at the Olympia. Not a hard punch was landed until Coffey poked Kerns on the chin.

The Somerville High ball team has two hard games to play this week in the Suburban League series, and must win both in order to retain its standing at the top of the list.

Tomorrow the Red and Blue nine clashes with Melrose at Recreation field, Somerville, and on Saturday Everett High will be Somerville's opponent also on its home grounds.

Somerville is the favorite to win both of these games, but the team will have to play its best in order to beat Melrose. Ross, the Melrose pitcher, is in fine shape for a hard game, and will work his hardest to down the Red and Blue.

The Everett team is shot to pieces by the loss of Durant, Lasky and Jones, and if these players continue to hold out till next Saturday, Coach O'Donnell's team will have but little chance against Somerville.

The Somerville team is the best balanced team in the league. It has a fast infield, a good outfield and a fair pitching staff. Thus far this season Fitzgerald and Tibbetts have been doing the mound work, and they have been getting along in first class shape.

Jim Robertson at first base, Hyde Sullivan at second, Foley at shortstop and Frankie Downing at third, are the fastest infield in the league, and the boys are all hitting the ball hard. St. Angelo, Blanchi and Hyde are playing good ball in the outfield.

Should Melrose High win over Somerville, Everett will take the lead in the league standing, with four games won and three lost.

Bill Sweeney Puts K. O. Over on Magee

ST. LOUIS, May 12.—In the eleventh inning of the Chicago game here Magee and Sweeney came to blows, the latter knocking the St. Louis player down before the players and the umpires could interfere. After Magee had singled he tried to steal second base, and, he says, after tagging him Sweeney hit him in the back with the ball.

He got up from the base and struck at the Chicago infielder, who dropped him with several punches to the head.

Waterbury Slightly Hurt in Polo Game

NEW YORK, May 12.—A break-up in the big four for the same reason that dissolved it in last year's international match—an accident to J. M. Waterbury—seemed imminent at the practice match on Phippe Field, Westerly, L. I., between the big four and the "future guests." Captain Waterbury's pony fell, pinning the player down. A few inches of skin, rubbed off the "funny bone" was the extent of Waterbury's injury, and he was in the game again after a brief delay.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

NEWS of the Braves' sifts around to Boston through various channels. Stallings, it seems, tried to secure Beals Becker the other day. Becker was formerly a Boston outfielder, but has played on several clubs since he wore a Boston uniform. He now draws salary from the Phillies. The Phillies are weak at shortstop and Stallings suggested a trade of Jack Martin, the substitute shortstop, for Becker. Martin has no chance to supplant Maranville and besides Stallings has a capable substitute infielder in Dugey.

* * *

DOOIN uses Becker as a pinch hitter for the most part and as he is weak at short it would seem as though the trade proposed by Stallings would have been advantageous to both clubs.

The Philadelphia manager, however, came back with another proposition which was to swap Martin for Hilly, an outfielder of the ever neard of. This disgusted the Boston manager so much that he called negotiations off at once.

* * *

STALLINGS also tried to secure Catcher McAvoy, one of Connie Mack's recruits, figuring that his backstop department needed more strength. Mack had asked waivers and was figuring on sending McAvoy to Baltimore to help out Jack Dunn. The American League clubs waived on McAvoy, but Stallings refused to waive. The result was that Connie decided to hold on to McAvoy and thus Stallings loses a catcher.

SECRETARY HEYDLER of the National League conducts a sort of combination Shibey Shaner roogly department and Hilly Evans Baseball Problem Inquirement. Recently he was called upon to decide an intricate baseball question. It was one of those freak plays of which there seems to be no end in baseball. This play rose in Brooklyn in a game between the Manual and Bushwick school teams and goes to show what curious situations can arise in the national game.

The score was 7 to 0 in ninth inning with Manual at the bat. The bases were full with one out. A substitute batter hit cleanly to left, but instead of running to first he walked toward the bench. The runner on third crossed the plate, but the runner from second was thrown out at the plate. The Bushwick catcher then threw to first. So much for the circumstances of the play. Here is the decision the umpire gave:

That the batter was out for walking to the bench and that the third out was the one at the plate. He allowed the run brought in by the runner who was on third to count.

Was the umpire right? Answer tomorrow.

* * *

FRED CLARKE, manager of the Pirates, has been disappointed so many times that he is a little leary about claiming the 1914 pennant in the National League. However, his team made such a good start in the spring that he feels inclined to predict that it will finish somewhere near the top. Clarke believes that the fact that all the Eastern clubs will have to play at Forbes Field before the Pirates take to the road for an Eastern invasion, gives him a distinct advantage, and if he can win the majority of the home games this month he will be in a fine position to continue the campaign.

* * *

FRANK SCHULTE, the former home-run king, is about to send his career with the Cubs, and at least, it looks that way. Frank O'Day, the manager, has benched Schulte on account of his weak hitting and this seems to be the beginning of the end.

Looking over the present makeup of the Chicago team it is noticed that Zimmerman, Archer and Schulte are the only men left who wore a Cub uniform when Chance managed the team in 1910. Tinker, Evers, Sheckard, Hiehle, Reulbach, Overall, Brown, Cole, Pfeister, Kling, Steinfeldt, Hofman and others who helped win fame on his last pennant that year have gone, never to return.

* * *

CONNIE MACK is very much surprised that Jimmy Murphy is able to play regularly and show some speed for a member of the Brook fods. When Murphy signed with the new organization Mack seemed amused, and he predicted that the veteran would soon break down. But Denny is still in the game.

Police League Opens the Season Today

The Revere policemen battle the Lynn police nine at Curtis Park, Revere, today, in the opening game of the Massachusetts Police League. The Revere nine this year is in the first division, and during the season will play the Lowell, Lawrence, Somerville and Everett teams.

Manager John Starkey has had his men practising at Curtis Park and also in the Revere High School gymnasium. He predicts that his team will be the top notcher at the close of the season.

Four Nap Regulars on the Hospital List

CLEVELAND, May 12.—When the crippled Cleveland American League team left for its first invasion of the East it left four regulars at home suffering from illness or injuries. Pitcher Steen, with his broken hand; Pitcher Kahler, who has tonsilitis; Catcher O'Neill, who has blood poisoning, and Outfielder Graney, with malaria, remained here. Twenty-four men made the trip.

Brockton Ready for Opening of League

Manager William Reardon of the Brockton Colonial League club has practically decided on his line-up for the opening clash in Pawtucket on Friday. If his present plans hold good, the following players will start the opening game: Shea, c.f.; Zahn, r.f.; Olney, 1b.; Stanton, l.f.; Spevaw, 3b.; Garvin, s.s.; Magee, 2b.; Sullivan, p

Two Big Auto Races for Panama Fair

NEW YORK, May 12.—Both the Vanderbilt Cup race and the Grand Prize will be contested early in the Spring of 1915 at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

This announcement was made after a conference between representatives of the Automobile Club of America, the American Automobile Association and the exposition.

The races will take place two weeks apart on a track constructed in the exposition grounds, the Vanderbilt Cup coming first.

Richards-Durborow in Swimming Match

Sam Richards and Charlie Durborow will meet in a swimming match on the Delaware river on Saturday, June 27. The course is from Philadelphia to Chester and return, a distance of thirty-four miles.

The New York Marathon swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook is scheduled for July 19 and Richards will also enter this.

O'Day Soon to Go, Says Chicago Rumor

CHICAGO, May 12.—"Hank" O'Day's regime as pilot of the Chicago Cubs will end on Friday, according to a report which has gained wide circulation about the baseball rialto. The same story had it that Roger Bresnahan will be elevated to the office. In the absence of President Charles H. Thomas, who is with the team studying its style of play, efforts to confirm the report proved unavailing.

QUIMET IN TOP FORM

Great Improvement Noted

BRITONS PRAISE PLAY

LONDON, May 12.—Critics agree that Francis Ouimet is now playing finer golf than he has so far shown in this country. He seems to have shortened his swing with the iron. He hit some very fine irons shots at Sandwich in a compact, incisive way and he is driving splendidly.

"He keeps the ball straighter," the Daily Mail expert says, "than I had seen him do on any previous occasion. In a strong wind nobody could have been much more accurate in the matter of direction."

Fred Herreshoff, who sprained an ankle in his hotel on Friday, is much better and there is now a strong probability that he will compete for the amateur championship.

YANKEE GOLFERS PLAY WELL ON ENGLISH LINKS

By CHARLES (CHICK) EVANS.
Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, May 12.—All golfers have been assigned hours for practice, and Travers and I tee off at 10 o'clock. Ouimet following at about 10:30.

I think all visitors will be welcome to view the matches, but for clubhouse privileges there will be a charge or five shillings a day, or five pounds for the week.

The golfing was excellent and the course crowded. Jerome Travers and I played the Hon. Michael and Dennis Scott, both morning and afternoon, and beat them, three and two, both rounds. Travers is playing a beautiful game and made an approximate 72 in the morning, but didn't play quite so well during the afternoon. Apparently he is having no trouble with his wooden clubs or his new kind of putter.

The two Scotts played a very good game, Dennis Scott making a 74.

Fraser Hale saw Sandwich for the first time and reeled off a 76 at once. After that he had some trouble, but I think he will soon get his stride. Ouimet made a 78 with two bad sixes as a starter.

Fred Herreshoff was out for the first time since his accident, but wasn't able to play. He expects to be well enough to play in the St. George's vase contest next Thursday, and says he will play in the championship.

Yale Crew Leader Has Lost His Place

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 11.—That the Yale varsity crew will row without Captain Denefre in the races of the year is now officially admitted, the Alumni Weekly making the announcement today.

The Weekly, which generally takes a pessimistic look at Yale athletics, is quite cheerful in its article, however, saying there is no man in the first boat unable to last four miles, and that the crew is going ten and fifteen miles a day.

New Soccer Plan Blow to Harvard

The new arrangement of the college soccer league schedule, by which all games are played in the Fall, rather than in the Spring, as heretofore, will take away from the Harvard team some of its best avenues of obtaining players.

The soccer season will open October 24 and conclude December 19. The contests will run in opposition to football, from which the Crimson team, three years champions, in the past have drawn such sterling players as Fish, Hopkins, Storer, Withington and others. Carnochan, Smart and Chadwick are other men who have played soccer, but next fall will have to choose between the association game and hockey.

Manager F. H. Storm and Manager-elect V. B. Chittenden of Harvard both protested loudly against the amendment to the constitution allowing the substitution of a Fall schedule for the customary Spring dates, but in vain.

ENGLAND'S POLO CHALLENGERS TO SAIL ON MAY 23

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, May 12.—It was announced that Lord Wimborne's team, which sails on the Carmania May 23, will be composed of Captain H. A. Tomkinson, Captain Hon. J. D. Y. Bingham, Captain F. W. Barrett (ex captain), and Major C. F. Hunter, back.

Lord Wimborne, interviewed by the Daily Mail, admitted the team is not representative of the best possibilities of English polo. "I have somewhat against my judgment decided to take out a team to fulfil the challenges. I suggested to Mr. Buckmaster that as he has, perhaps, the best side that has been in London for many years, he should take it out. I would lend the ponies and give all assistance I could. I think Buckmaster's team the best in England. It's good enough to win the polo cup.

"Having failed to get the players we wanted, I feel I have got to go through with it. Without promise of more co-operation I don't think I could take the team out again another year, assuming we are beaten this time. In the future we shall have to make a combined effort if we wish to put the best side on the ground.

"We are handicapped by the early date of the competition in the United States. We have to depend on the weather for practice or else take the side abroad, as I did. It would be much better if the date were altered to late Autumn. If it is not altered I don't think another team will go out as early as this, and the cup will remain in the United States by default."

BRAVES TACKLE PIRATES TODAY IN EXTRA GAME

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 12—Manager Stallings and his band of Boston Braves are here for a single game against the Pirates today after which they jump to Cincinnati for a long series.

The Boston boys are mad clean through and threaten all sorts of things when they meet the Giants again, and from the way things are going with the Pirates, they will have a grudge to square here when they quit this afternoon.

Stallings and Owner Gaffney of the Boston team are sore on Umpire Rigler who, they declare, is everything but an umpire. Neither will retract anything they have been quoted as saying about Umpire Rigler's work in Saturday's game. Stallings added a few more words which he said.

"Rigler as an umpire is a very good groundskeeper," and also, I wouldn't have been in a mourning or regretful mood if the arrestingly ugly Rigler came up from Cuba and sunk with him." President Gaffney said this [illegible] protesting [illegible] fining [illegible] opinion [illegible] Meyers had four strikes by right before he hit the ball that won the game.

"We have never had one trouble with any other umpire than Rigler, and we do not want him to officiate in any of our future games. He is an incapable official and he is classed among all ball players. It is a mystery to me that he has remained in the National League as long as he has.

I shall keep up my fight to have Rigler kept away from my club. If I can secure his dismissal from the League I shall be more than pleased."

Manager Bill Bradley, of the Tip-Tops has signed Harry Vernon, the former Amherst College pitcher, for two years. Vernon was batting mate for Henry, now with Washington.

A new gymnasium, to cost $150,000, is to be erected for Worcester Academy, according to announcement just given out. The funds will be provided by the trustees and the new gymnasium will be ready in September, 1915.

Wesleyan's tennis team easily defeated Dartmouth, five matches to one. Dartmouth took one match in the doubles mainly through the good work of Hoy.

Hinsdale Tech has arranged a race with Smithtown for next Saturday at Concord. The course, which is only a quarter of a mile in length, has been considered too short for the Boston crews, which train for a longer distance.

The Boston Y. M. C. A. is having a ten-lap cinder track built in the rear of the Y. M. C. A. building, to be ready by June 1.

Roxbury Latin and Noble & Greenough League Baseball game will be played today at the Somerville Recreation Field.

The Worcester English High has challenged the Hunting School crew for a match race to be rowed on Lake Quinsigamond.

Princeton's Spring football practice ended with the annual prize kicking contest. The winners were, C. A. Bowman '17, in drop-kicking and H. H. Giles '15, in punting. The forward passing ended in a tie between H. H. Lee and E. L. Shea.

In the first tennis tournament between Sargent School and Radcliffe College, Sargent won three matches out of the five single matches in the Radcliffe courts. Miss Marion Flandrau, Miss Lenore Davidson, Miss Ruth Little, Miss Elizabeth Chandler and Miss Frederick Gilbert were the winners.

The Mechanic Arts track team is working daily in preparation for the Rindge Tech meet, which will be held at Russell Field, Cambridge, Friday.

The Wellesley High School interclass tennis tourney opened with matches in boys' and girls' doubles in the boys' doubles, the seniors, F. Putnam and O. Hart, defeated the freshmen pair, R. Harvey and H. Davis, 6—3, 6—3, 6—2.

In the girls' doubles the sophomore team, Helen Babcock and Nellie Parker, defeated the senior team, Nellie Parker, Frances Taplin and Ilione Meyers also won.

Spring football practice at Yale was brought to a close with [illegible] held in Individual events. Otis [illegible] Guernsey of New York, who scored drop-kicks against Harvard and Princeton last Fall, won the all-round championship cup. F. F. Ainsworth of Brookline, Mass., won on catching punts.

F. S. Marden, Jr., of St. Marks' School, won the Harvard interscholastic tennis tournament by defeating S. Thayer of Andover in the final match, 2—6, 6—3, 6—3 and 8—6.

The Harvard tennis team plays its second match of the season with the University of Pittsburgh team this afternoon on Jarvis Field. Pittsburgh is heralded to be a strong team and Heidlerry, the captain, is supposed to be one of the best college players in Pennsylvania.

Harvard Varsity Oarsmen Return

Tudor Gardiner and Bart Harwood, two of the Harvard varsity oarsmen who have been out of the boat for several days, are back again, and Coach Wray is looking more hopeful.

Harwood takes his old seat at No 6, and Parsons goes back to the second boat [illegible] who has been rowing at No 7, is still in the infirmary with [illegible]

Gardiner who was rowing at No 4, took a little practice in a single shell, as he has entered the singles at the American Henley at Philadelphia, which will come off Saturday.

WALTHAM BOY HERO TODAY AT RED SOX GAME

The great western invasion of Boston starts today out at Fenway Park when the St. Louis Browns line up against the Red Sox. Other years this collection from Missouri was the big joke of the league, but the way they have been going since the new manager, Branch Rickey, grasped the reins has caused plenty of excitement and not a little worry in the East Johnson circuit.

Tonny has been set smart as Jack Leary and Lefty Leifield, but the way he has been doing some great work on first base for the Browns.

His Waltham friends propose to show him that they have been following him in his good work, and have planned to give him a rousing welcome.

WALTHAM BOY HAS DAY.

About 400 of them will turn out and sections K and L in the grandstand have been reserved for them. They will meet at the Hotel Buckminster, and, headed by the Lexington High School Fife and Drum Corps, will march to the grounds.

Citizen of Waltham are to present to Leary a diamond ring, and Mayor Thomas P. Kearns, an old ball player himself, will make the presentation speech. The Waltham High School boys will give a floral piece.

Georgs Foster or Hugh Bedient are the natural selections from a Boston viewpoint, while Earl Hamilton, the Federal reactionary, or Lone George Wellman will probably push the plants across for the hostile hosts.

Both these individuals can pitch real baseball on occasions and their starts of late seem to have been occasions. With the decidedly weak batting strength of the Carrigans, either one is likely to start all kinds of bother and force the Boston box artist, whoever he may be, to pitch the shutout kind of baseball that is needed nowadays to get a win.

IMPORTANT SERIES FOR SOX.

This home stand will be one of the most important of the season, for if the Sox can come out on the long end by any comfortable margin they will be in a splendid position to look after the front of the race.

Joe Wood, on whom more than anyone else depends the success or failure of the team, is looking pretty fit these days and shows all his old-time zing[illegible] in banging out fungoes and warming up. Consequently, it would not be at all surprising to see Manager Bill trot him out against the Browns during the present series. "Smoky Joe" has always found this particular bunch the largest kind of pickling and [illegible] they may be selected as the mark at which Sir Joseph will take his first shot.

Lewis Wins Mat Bout.

SPRINGFIELD, May 12.—Ed Lewis of Kentucky defeated Myron [illegible] Brooklyn in a [illegible] wrestling match here, taking two straight falls. The first in 4m 4s and the second in 11m 10s.

The crack Harvard baseball nine gets its first real tryout, since the return from the Spring trip, on Soldiers Field this afternoon, when the fast Fordham aggregation arrives looking for bother. This particular outfit is about as classy as any college team that Harvard will have to face all season, and any slump on the part of the Crimson outfit is liable to put a crimp in the ambition of the nine's heads to win every home game this season.

However, Coach Sexton has been a stone to stack up against some real competition and if the New Yorkers run true to form, he will have the opportunity to observe just where his team gets off. Against the smaller college teams Harvard has looked wonderfully classy for a strictly amateur lineup, and though one game was dropped to Georgetown during the Southern trip, this happened before the team was really in playing form. And again, the Washington team's measure was taken directly afterward.

Rex Hitchcock, who went three innings Saturday without giving Amherst a hit, may be started in the box, though the probabilities are that Mahan, who has not worked since Thursday, will have the call.

McCann, Fordham's star box artist, now that Keelan is out of the game with a torn ligament, is booked to try to fence the Crimson batters, and if an occasional wildness, which seems to be his only besetting sin, does not pounce him, he is very likely to make a mighty good attempt.

Somerville Class Meet.

Somerville High will hold its first [illegible]erclass meet May 15 at Tufts oval. The Suburban games, and under Coach Steve Mahoney's care, is showing the team is coming along slowly for signs of development.

The Object of Life

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A VERY worldly old woman once said that the object of life was to love her husband, to preserve her figure and to enjoy life as well as she might.

And that seems to come fairly near the ideal of every one of us, does it not, girls? Only first you must find your Darby and make sure you are his Joan.

Some girls think that the most unjust thing in the whole mis-management of the world is that a man can go about looking for a mate, while a woman has to wait for one to find her. Probably this is the greatest blessing Providence has bestowed upon us. The men exhaust all their perceptions hunting, hunting, hunting—and all the while the game is likely to turn about and capture the hunter without his having any idea what has happened to him. Women have only to lie like Brer Fox, observe the masculine parade as it goes by and take the man they choose. The only complication arises when two women fix on the same parader. And the only trouble and tragedy comes when girls are so unfortunate or so foolish as to want a man who belongs to some other woman already.

But the girl who cares sincerely for a worthy man—mark you, "a worthy man"—not some popinjay whose chief joy in life is winning hearts and casting them aside, will win him if she, too, is worthy.

The real "object of life" is to select and secure a proper husband.

To acknowledge this is not to subscribe to something unmaidenly or below the dignity of a fine girl. Don't ever get to thinking that you have a higher destiny than mere "domestic servitude," as one very advanced girl put it to me in a letter that I must quote.

Lorraine writes:

"Men don't like me any better than I like them. I used to have a lot of fellows but I got thinking that I could do better with my life than get married and drudge in domestic servitude for a husband and children, so I cut out the boys and am working hard. So now at twenty-four I am earning twenty dollars a week and am advancing steadily. Don't you think I am just right?"

A WOMAN'S LOT

My dear Lorraine, I think you are just wrong.

We are women, my dear girl, and it is the lot of women to be wives and mothers. Many women are happy and useful who are neither, but life probably so shaped their lot, and not money-making as a goal.

Any woman who has the power to judge life broadly and logically will tell you that the finest thing in life is to be properly mated with a noble man. This does not mean that you must grow to be a husband hunter or a wash-hunting flirt. The truth is that men and women need each other to complete and fill their natures. Home-making is still the chief department in life for the normal woman. And the normal woman marries because by her sheer womanliness she charms and wins.

Whatever your work in life, go about it with a contented and earnest spirit—but do nothing that will unfit you for woman's supreme destiny of noble wifehood and motherhood. And don't fear that you will have to be an old maid whether you like or not. If you are sweet and wholesome and womanly, when the man for you comes across your horizon you will know it. And your natural womanliness will enable you to do as much toward attracting and winning him as his privilege of asking the question and actively wooing you permits him to do.

HOPELESS WITHOUT WIVES

Men without wives are hopeless, helpless creatures—and they know it. And the object of life is happy marriage, toward the realization of which wise nature has decided you must do your full share.

Don't water your gifts. Don't get into an unfeminine frame of mind. As the sunlight draws the flowers, two natures that are properly mated will attract each other; and you will so play your part in the great stream of life.

Britzmann's Evidence

In one of the courts a case required the testimony of a young German immigrant.

"Now, Britzmann," said the lawyer for the plaintiff, "what do you do?"

"Ah vo pretty vell," replied the witness.

"I am not inquiring as to your health. I want to know what you do."

"York!"

"Where do you work?" continued the counsel.

"In a victory."

"What kind of a factory?"

"It vas a pretty big victory."

"Your Honor," said the lawyer, turning to the judge, "if this goes on we'll need an interpreter."

Then he turned to the witness again.

"Now, Britzmann, what do you make in the factory?" he asked.

"You want to know vot I make in der victory?"

"Exactly. Tell us what you make?"

"Fifteen dollars a week."

Then the interpreter got a chance to earn his daily bread.

Could Guess

The Various Voices—In the far corner lies William the Conqueror; behind the organ, where you can't see 'em, are the bones o' Guy Fawkes, Robin Hood and Cardinal Wolsey. Now, does that guide book, as I seen you have in your hand, tell you who is lyin' 'ere, sir?

The Sceptical Tourist—No, but I can guess.

Arithmetic

"Yes," said the fat man with the gold watch chain spread across his ample waistcoat, "I have two and a half dozen children."

The other man gaped. Then one of them said:

"Surely—two and a?——"

"Quite so," said the fat man. "Two and a half-dozen, which is six, makes eight. Two and a half-dozen."

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Remi and Matteo

REMI hadn't gone far before he wished he had someone to travel with. Just ahead of him were two little ragged street urchins talking away merrily and he looked at them a little enviously. They seemed to be having such a good time in spite of the fact that they were dirty and ranged, and—why, hadn't Remi seen that one face before? Why, yes, it was, it must be. "Matteo, Matteo," he shouted excitedly, and then as the little fellow turned at the sound of his name, "Don't you remember me? I am the boy you met at Garoffi's!" Apparently Matteo did remember, for a second later they were talking like old friends, while the other little fellow had gone about his business.

"Where are you going?" said Matteo, finally.

"Down to Chevanon to see Madame Barberin who used to take care of me when I was a baby," answered Remi, and then suddenly, "Don't you go along with me, she would be so glad to see you, and we could have a good time travelling along together."

THEY GO TO VISIT

Matteo had taken a fancy to Remi the first time he had met him, and now seemed quite willing to go with him wherever he might happen to suggest, so the two little fellows travelled along quite happily, for they were young and there wasn't a great deal to worry about. However, there was someone in Paris who would have given a great deal to be able to locate Remi, for the disappearance of the child had worried Daubrate more than a little.

He finally decided, in order to avoid further questions on the part of Lucile, to write her a letter and tell her that in spite of all his efforts he had been unable to locate Remi, and from certain things that he had heard, he believed the child had died quite recently.

"That ought to hold her for a while," he said to himself, "anyway until I can get hold of him and place him where he won't make any more trouble."

And in the meantime the object of his thoughts was walking gaily on his way toward Chevanon. Remi, who had a little money, had bought a cow to take down to Madame Barberin regardless of the fact that he and Matteo had no idea where more money was to come from. The children were perfectly happy in the present, and when they finally reached the until little yard, and led the cow safely through the gate, Remi was as excited as though he was on a visit to the king.

Madame Barberin came out of the cottage as the boys kicked at the door, and at the sight of Remi, the tears started to her eyes and she kissed him over and over again.

THE LETTER

"Dear child," she said finally, as she led the way into the cottage, "I believe good times are going to begin for you at last." And going to the cupboard she brought the slip of paper that Daubrais had left for her with the name of the London law firm plainly written out on it. Remi spelled out the words carefully with Matteo looking over his shoulder, and with Mother Barberin watching with her heart in her eyes. Hadn't she treasured this slip of paper from day to day hoping that some day it would bring wealth to the child she loved better than anything on earth?

Remi was plainly excited at the news, and, childlike, he wished to start off immediately for London. Mme. Barberin coaxed him to stay with her at least over night, so that they would feel more like undertaking such a long journey in the morning. But Remi refused, and Matteo was only too glad to follow Remi wherever he might lead. She went with them as far as the door, and the sight of the cow grazing peacefully in the yard took her back to that day long ago when she had parted with her Remi. She kissed him goodbye tenderly and watched the two children as they trudged out of the gate and on their way. If she had but known it, she was sending Remi into the clutches of an unscrupulous scoundrel rather than into the arms of a loving mother for Remi, was on his way to London.

(Tomorrow, Detective Remi.)

Remi Spelled Out the Words Carefully

Up-to-the Minute Jokes

The class had seemed exceptionally bright and intelligent that afternoon, and in consequence there was a look of smug satisfaction on the teacher's face.

"Now, James," she asked, "do you really understand the meaning of extinct?"

"Yes'm," replied James.

"Then name one bird that is now extinct."

James hesitated a moment, then:

"Chipper," he exclaimed.

"Chipper?" inquired the teacher. "And what kind of bird is that?"

"My pet pigeon," came the reply. "Its cat caught him this morning."

During a concert tour of the late Theodore Thomas and his celebrated orchestra, one of the musicians died and the following telegram was immediately dispatched to the parents of the deceased:

"John Black died suddenly today. Advise by wire as to disposition."

In a few hours the answer was received, reading as follows:

"We are heart-broken; his disposition was a roving one."

They were discussing the relative position of various countries as musical centres. Germany seemed to have the most votaries, much to the evident displeasure of one excitable Italian, who wished his own country to carry off the palm.

"Italy is turning out the most musicians, and has always turned out the most," he cried.

"Ach!" exclaimed a German present, "can you blame them?"

"Professor, I know my son is rather slow, but in the two years that you have had charge of his education he must have developed a tendency in some direction or other. What occupation do you suggest as a possible outlet for his energies, such as they are?"

"Well, sir, I think he is admirably fitted for moving pictures of schmass a plenty."

"Now, my friends," said the candidate, making another effort to arouse enthusiasm in his hearers, "what do we need in order to carry this constituency by the biggest majority in its history?"

The response was immediate and enthusiastic.

"Another candidate" yelled the audience.

His Reason

A doctor said the other day that a hotel manger once asked him how many feet of gas the average gas-suicide inhaled.

"I don't know," said the doctor. "Some hundreds, I suppose. But why do you ask that?"

"There was a gas-suicide at my hotel last night," was the reply, "and I want to charge up his gas to his executors."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I SEEN a line clipped out of some poem the other day," said the Manicure Lady. "Something went 'When whirlwinds of rebellion shake the world.' It seems to me, George, that something awful is going to happen before long. Goodness knows that the papers is full of scrapping and disagreeing now, and I don't know what it is all going to come to. Sometimes I'm glad that I ain't a man, because I would never feel like shouldering a rifle and marching away to get drilled. The drilling you get at West Point may be all right, but I mean getting drilled clean with one of them bullets out of a high power gun."

"I don't think it will amount to much," said the Head Barber. "Of course, them Mexicans is at it hammer and tongs, but they ain't never happy anyway unless they are up to something. I think the Anglo Saxephone countries will keep their heads and fix things up before it gets to much war."

"I hope so," said the Manicure Lady, "but all the time I have dreams that there are a lot of foreign soldiers of some kind running loose all over our hills and valleys, shooting every one they get a look at. I had a dream last night that I was hiding in one of them ravines, with about a hundred soldiers looking for me and my brother Wilfred. The only thing that made me know it was a dream was that Wilfred got up and fought like a lion for me, killing all the enemy as fast as they came. I knew, even in my sleep, that couldn't be, because he ain't got no sand, so I woke up."

"Dreams don't mean anything," said the Head Barber. "The way I feel about it, if there has got to be war we have got to have it, and if it comes to a showdown and I have got to go, I suppose I will go as brave as I can, but I don't believe much in shooting men, and I don't think we are going to see any of it outside of Mexico."

"Goodness knows I don't want to ever see any of it," said the Manicure Lady. "War would certainly put this business on the hummer for fair. It ain't been any too flourishing as it is, but with war in our land there wouldn't be a gent for miles around that would think of having his nails did, and I guess you wouldn't see many men that wanted a shave, either."

"I was wondering what I would do if it came to war. I would have to give up this line, of course, and about the only thing I could do then would be nursing wounded soldiers, like Miss Florence Nightingale."

"I don't think she ever got paid for her work," said the Head Barber. "There wouldn't be much profit in that kind of nursing."

"I know," admitted the Manicure Lady, "but she got famous, and her name will live for ever. I'm a good deal like brother Wilfred that way, George. I have always had a hunch that I would like to leave a name behind me after I have went. I would like to do something that would make me kind of immortal, like Marie Antoinette or Marie Corelli. Gee, how grand that would be."

"I wouldn't care none for that," said George.

"No," said the Manicure Lady, "I don't suppose many barbers want to be immortal."

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were sluggish and irregular this afternoon. Markets were in a rut and operators expected something to happen which would give a turn to prices. In New York issues there were unchanged, including Chesapeake & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, Reading, Lehigh Valley, New Haven and Steel, a list which testified to market inactivity. Southern Pacific was up ¼ and Union Pacific ⅜, while losses included Missouri Pacific ⅝, American Telephone ⅝, American Can ⅛, Amalgamated ⅜ and Baltimore & Ohio ⅛.

In Boston the weakness of United Fruit was a feature today. It sold as low as 151. By afternoon at 152, it was off 2½. Among other declines were Greene-Cananea ⅝, U. S. Smelting ⅝, New Haven ⅛, Calumet & Hecla ⅛ and North Butte ⅛. Boston & Maine was up ¼, Granby ⅛ and Osceola 2.

Instead of selling Americans in New York, foreigners sought today purchases on London account amounting to nearly 5,000 shares.

MARKET OPENED DULL.

The New York market had a quiet opening and was dull all the morning and later, first hour business being under a total of 47,000 shares. At the opening prices ranged higher, even Missouri Pacific showing a gain. The idea of its seeking an extension on notes due at the first of next month did not inspire confidence. Opening at 17⅝, it soon sold down to 16⅝. It partly recovered to 16¾, a few minutes, but was a weak spot in the list. There was talk of the road going into the hands of receivers, but it did not meet with much acquiescence as a probability. It seemed to be generally believed that when conflicting interests get through measuring for an advance, the same old difficulties will quickly be planned, if it has not been already. One statement by the News Bureau is considered apt, that publication remarking:

"Some observers will selling of Missouri Pacific came principally from a syndicate that was short bought Canadian Pacific, Reading, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Union Pacific recently in large operations. It was inferred that the syndicate was going into longer hauls."

The early tone of the market was hesitant. It became irregular and neither side seemed willing to support convictions as to its logical trend. Traders were bearish as a class, but they feared that some powerful interest took a different view.

IMPROVEMENT IN LONDON.

Previous to the opening of markets in this country Americans had better support in London, where sentiment rose with connois. Business was stimulating there. The list of internationals was irregular and fluctuations were small. The Continental demand for gold is believed to be the most important bear factor at the British capital. However, Londoners do not believe that this country will be able in the end to restrict peace in Mexico without invading that country, but temporarily that view is having slightly less market influence upon the other side. It is reasoned that where there is delay there is hope.

The New York market became almost stagnant before the morning was over, and was weaker in the second hour. Among strong issues, however, was International Harvester. Some traders are of the opinion that the United States Circuit Court will decide in its favor in the anti-trust suit. This is a possibility of an early decision created some demand.

NO CHANGE AT MIDDAY.

Irregularity prevailed at midday and by afternoon many leaders were unchanged. The weakness of Consolidated Gas was attributed to the company's convertible bond issue to the amount of $25,000,000.

Coppers were quiet and reflected inertia in the metal trade. What buying there may be of electrolytic is said to be almost wholly European. There is no domestic demand worthy of mention. The selling price is now 14¾ cents a pound, but small dealers are shading this. They are not carrying much metal.

If the exportation of gold had any influence it was bearish. It being believed that before the present movement is over from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 will have been sent abroad. But this has less effect that would be likely if the supply of money in this country was not so abundant. The exchange rate on London was $4.85.

LATEST "SHIP" MOVE.

Missouri Pacific directors have not prepared to meet the notes for nearly $25,000,000 which mature on June 1, so far as is known, but have resolved to ask the holders of the same to extend them for a year. The notes run for three years and pay 5 per cent. If extension is granted the holders will get 6 per cent. for the extra year.

Of the notes, George J. Gould owns $2,500,000, John D. Rockefeller $1,000,000, and various banking institutions from $250,000 to $500,000. Holland also is a large holder.

The plan has not been underwritten by bankers, and none of the non-assenting notes, it is stated, will be paid in cash, so that the securities will be in default unless all the note holders agree to the extension.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The price of Pennsylvania crude oil has been reduced from $2 to $1.80 a barrel.

In New York it is expected that Chairman A. Barton Hepburn will be offered the position of executive head of the regional bank to be established in that city under the new currency reserve system.

The London copper warrant market was firm this morning, and by noon spot was up 7s. 6d.; futures 5s. 9d.

Council Rejects Surrender Plans on Quarantine

The City Council rode rough shod over Corporation Counsel John A. Sullivan, rejecting the ordinance to surrender the city quarantine station to the Federal government, in conformance with the recommendation of the executive session, from which only Councillors Wood and Collins dissented.

Although the public hearings have been closed, the corporation counsel was allowed to appear before the executive committee and again place the government's case before the Council, and urge the passing of the ordinance. He was heard at length.

Welcome Men Dead in a Good Cause

History Will Show That Their Lives Were Not Wasted, and That Better Civilization Began with Their Death

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

The men who died at Vera Cruz have been brought home to their country. Part of them were landed in New York yesterday. The rest are due in Boston today.

They lie side by side, some in New York, some on their way to their last resting places in New England, their eyes closed forever. The American flag covers each body.

Among them are representatives of many races that have made this country—Irishmen, Jews, one Syrian.

Every race that comes to this land is ready to fight for it and ready to die for it. May the people remember that in their grief and forget forever the narrow prejudices of race and religion.

Freedom and opportunity make heroes and good men of every race.

Every hour of our history and every battle in our wars prove it.

It is sad to look upon those dead faces—all young men, all strong, with years of possibility in their powerful bodies, now rigid.

What a waste of life, what needless death it seems. But the life is not wasted.

Just as surely as the seed that goes into the ground this Spring will bring manifold returns, just so surely will those bodies, now to be buried, represent the harvest of future civilization and better government.

The details of our future work in Mexico time will work out. The doing of a national duty may be delayed; it may come quickly. But it will be done. Those dead soldiers and sailors, mere boys nearly all of them, will be honored and remembered among those that have made their nation greater and helped to extend order, good government and opportunity.

In another sense, the dead men will prove benefactors of their country. Thousands will look upon their faces and millions join in the solemn welcome. In such a moment there comes the inspiration that a nation needs.

There is quiet and peace in those dead faces. Their countrymen looking at them realize how far duty done transcends all else. To give "the last measure of devotion" makes life worth while, and nothing else is worth while.

Seeing those men who died willingly for their country, many will resolve to live better for the country and for others.

The powerful desire to be worthy of a nation for which men die so cheerfully will fill many hearts today. And those boys who went smilingly to death, whose hands are still and ears closed forever, are stirring in the minds of those that survive thoughts that are lofty and resolutions that will bear fruit in better life and work, and greater love for humanity.

Dead on the field of honor, the first victims of the war will live as partners in a work much greater than they can ever know. Their lives are ended. No more excitement, hope, struggle, happiness or sorrow; all is ended for them, except peace and rest.

But they are to be envied, not pitied. Their work will live.

Los Angeles for Progress; New York and Boston Lag Behind

Last week the people of Los Angeles by a vote well over the necessary two-thirds voted to issue bonds to the amount of $6,500,000 for the purpose of utilizing the water power of the great aqueduct, approaching completion, for generating electric light and power and distributing them to citizens under municipal ownership and operation.

The fight for this measure was led by the Los Angeles Examiner, which, like other Hearst newspapers, wherever located, stands squarely for municipal ownership of public utilities.

Viewing the progress made by this movement to save for the people the values created by the people, it is disheartening to note the weak indifference with which the acquirement of public utilities by private persons to be exploited for private advantage is regarded in New York and Boston.

The people build subways and pay their nickels that a few shrewd monopolists may profit by them. Our streets, which might be a source of colossal revenue, bring in hardly enough to pay for their cleaning and repair. Retained in public hands and operated for the common good the cost of service of all these public utilities might be greatly reduced, and their earnings still be great enough to greatly reduce taxation.

So unbusinesslike a policy if followed by any corporation would put it out of business speedily. In this instance it is the people who ignore the plainest business principles. Their representatives share the public indifference. Only the public service corporations are animated by strictly business principles, and work for their own pockets all the time.

Without people to serve, the gas, electric light and power, telephone and transportation franchises would be worthless. Every time the people have tried to bargain with some corporation for a share in the values thus created they have been swindled on the deal. Only by municipal ownership outright can public rights be secured. The more alert and progressive Western municipalities see this and act upon it.

Not Dead in Vain

The nation mourns the dead brought back from Vera Cruz and the others dead in Mexico, lying without graves on the open field. But the mourners know that no man dies vainly in a just cause and that these deaths will be followed by a new life and a new civilization in the land south of us. (SEE EDITORIAL.)

Rest on, embalmed and sainted dead!
Dear as the blood ye gave;
No impious footstep here shall tread
The herbage of your grave.

Nor shall your glory be forgot
While Fame her record keeps,
Or Honor points the hallowed spot
Where Valor proudly sleeps.

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER LXI.

CARYL had been so much astonished at Kelley Delaine's frank admission of love for her sister that for the moment she forgot her own especial grievance against him, and answered meekly.

"What do you want to know?"

"I want to ask you why you have told your sister that John Redfield has been taking you to dinner, to the theatre, and so forth. Another thing that gives me the right to ask is that John Redfield is my friend, as I have already told you. Why have you used his name and his sister's?"

The girl flushed hotly. "Why shouldn't I if I want to?" she returned.

"Because it is dangerous to tell what is not true," the man reminded her.

"You mean," said Caryl, "that I have told my sister that I knew Dora Redfield well? Yes, I told Judy that—because I knew she would worry less than if she thought I went out alone with a man."

"With what man?" asked Delaine, his eyes fixed upon her.

Caryl twisted uncomfortably. She felt almost as if she were being hypnotized and she heard herself saying: "John Redfield, of course."

"Why did you say John Redfield was paying you attention?" insisted Delaine.

Suddenly the girl's wrath burst forth again, sweeping away her temporary submission.

"What business is that of yours?" she retorted angrily.

Delaine sighed with forced patience. "We have gone over all this ground already," he remarked, "but I will tell you again that John Redfield is my friend."

His unmoved manner irritated the girl almost to frenzy. She sprang again to her feet, striking her hands together sharply.

"Your friend," she ejaculated. "You mean, I suppose, that you have to protect your friend against me—that I am not good enough to associate with him! Well, I will go with him where I please—understand? You can tell Judy this if you wish!" She tossed her head and glared at him defiantly. "You have to protect him against me, eh!" she reiterated.

Delaine had risen, too, and now caught her by the wrists.

"Be quiet!" he ordered, in a low tense tone. "No, I am not trying to protect my friends against you, but against your falsehoods. I did not mean to say this, I did not mean to seem brutal, but you force me to it. You have spoken out your thought. Now I shall speak out mine. You are using John Redfield's name to shield someone else."

"That's a lie!" she exclaimed. Then, with a desire to gain time: "Ask John Redfield himself, if you dare, and see how he stands your interference."

Delaine took his hands from her wrists and replied gravely: "I can scarcely do that, you see," he said, "for John Redfield started for Europe nearly three weeks ago."

She sank back with a low exclamation of dismay, sinking down on the divan and burying her face in her hands. Kelley Delaine was a strong man, but the sight of suffering moved him painfully. He felt for a moment as if forced to watch the agony of some creature whom he must wound in defense of someone he loved. He knew that he had been just, but at the thought of the pain he caused for a moment irresolute, looking at the girl. Then he laid a gentle hand on the bowed head.

"Child," he said softly, "child, it's not too late to start fresh. We can straighten the matter out yet—and I will forget all about it. I'm going to leave you alone now until you get a little more quiet. We all have done foolish things in our lives and have regretted them."

He stopped. He saw that she was listening, and when she spoke he bent down to catch what she said.

"Please leave me alone for a few minutes," she murmured. "Please leave me alone!"

She heard him close the door softly behind him and she sprang again to her feet. She must think quickly. He had found her out! That was the agony—not the thought of the lie itself, but only that she had been discovered!

Fifteen minutes later Kelley Delaine returned looking as if nothing out of the ordinary had happened. In his hand he bore a little tray with a plate of biscuit and two cups of steaming chocolate upon it.

"I had an early breakfast," he explained, "and I find myself a bit empty in consequence. So I made Wang brew me some chocolate and I thought perhaps you would join me in a cup before we settle down to work."

He smiled and pulling a small table forward, put the tray upon it.

"Here are some little crackers, too," he said, "Take some of these."

Soon Caryl Marvin was chatting as usual, an occasional long-drawn breath being the only evidence of her recent outburst. But when Kelley Delaine arose to ring for Wang to take out the tray, she detained him, laying a light hand on his arm.

"While I have the courage to speak of the matter, I want to tell you that I am sorry that I lost my temper," she pleaded. "Perhaps"—looking up into his face with wide eyes, "you will forgive me when I tell you how unhappy I am. For the man who has been paying me attention and has made me like him, told me—and I believed him—that he was John Redfield."

Kelley Delaine was off his guard on the instant and started violently.

"The d—— scoundrel!" he began. Then, as he looked at the girl, a cold hand seemed to be closing slowly about his heart. For he knew that she lied.

Only One in One Thousand Is Alive

To Be Alive Means More Than to Be a Breathing, Eating, Drinking, Talking Human Creature.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

IN every thousand people who are living on this earth, not more than one is ALIVE.

To be really alive means more than to be a moving, breathing, eating, drinking and talking human creature.

He who is actually alive finds the days too short for the wonderful experiences which are involved in this state.

He finds life itself a continual adventure, full of interest, and with opportunities for pleasure and achievement at every turn.

He finds himself an object of delightful study, however dissatisfied he may be with the present results of that study; for he perceives that he is a crude chunk of Eternity, and that in himself lie all the powers and possibilities latent in the Universe. And that in himself lies the WILL to work out these possibilities.

He who is fully alive enjoys the earth and all its pleasures. He loves the slap of the wind upon his cheek; the dash of the waves upon his breast; the motion of his limbs in the swift walk; the thrill of the good steed's body under his own; the ecstacy of rhythm in the dance; the swing of the oar. He loves labor and the fatigue which follows, and in his harmoniously developed frame there is not one lazy or unused muscle.

But being alive does not stop here.

The man who is practicing the art of being alive to its full extent has an alert, receptive brain and an awakened spirit. Without these, he would simply be a splendid animal.

With these, he is the highest expression of the Creative Power visible to mortal vision. And with these he finds his opportunities for happiness, usefulness and pleasure in existence threefold.

He knows the pleasures of the physical plane, for which his body is fashioned; he draws to himself the pleasures of the mental plane, and he senses the pleasures of the spiritual plane which lies near, and derives power therefrom.

The man who is alive in all these ways must radiate light, cheer, sympathy and helpfulness to all who come within his aura. He understands the temptations and the troubles and the sorrows of all beings who are less alive than he, and his compassion is greater than his tendency to condemnation.

Being alive to the vibrations from three realms he knows all temptations, and from having made many missteps himself, in his road to unfoldment, he can sympathize, counsel and help onward many who have not been able to make his progress.

The man who is really alive realizes that he must use his own position in the world, and his own environment as the first field of action, if he hopes to reach success in any venture. He must not wait for luck or a miracle to give him a change of location and surroundings better suited to his taste. Out of whatever destiny has bestowed upon him he will make the conditions which he desires.

And out of every day he will make a little bit of heaven.

No difficulty can discourage, no obstacle dismay, nor trouble dishearten the man who has acquired the art of being alive. Difficulties are but dares of fate; obstacles are but hurdles to try his skill; troubles but bitter tonics to give him strength; and he rises higher and looms greater after each encounter with adversity.

The man who is wholly alive finds pleasure in the simplest things, and to him nothing is commonplace, nothing is menial. And he is never bored.

For nature, human nature, and himself are ever interesting subjects of contemplation and study. And the future to him is a radiant vision, growing ever more and more wonderful.

ARE YOU ALIVE?

The Brain of 8,000,000 Women

By EDWIN MARKHAM

AMONG many aspects of feminism dramatized in that big, live book, "The Precipice," written by Ella W. Peattie of Chicago, we find a view of the work of women's clubs. Note the perspective of the work these clubs are doing all over the land. One of the women of the story is musing on the situation:

"The Federation of Women's Clubs! Two thousand women gathered in the name of what?

"Why, of culture, of literature, of sisterhood, of benevolence, of music, art, town beautification, the abolition of child labor, the abolition of sweatshops, the extension of peace and opportunity.'

"As she saw these women of many types, from all the States, united, too, in the cultivation of things not easy of definition, she felt that, in spite of drawbacks, it must be good.

"She listened to their papers, heard their earnest propagandas. A distinguished Jewess from New York told of the work among the immigrants, and the methods by which they were created into intelligent citizens; a beautiful Kentuckian spoke of the work among the white mountaineers; a very venerable gentlewoman from Chicago, exquisitely frail, talked on behalf of the children in factories; a crisp, curt, efficient woman from Oregon advocated the dissemination of books among the 'lumberjacks.'

"They were ingenious in their pursuit of benevolences, and their annual reports were the impersonal records of personal labors. They had started libraries, made little parks, inaugurated playgrounds, instituted exchanges for the sale of women's wares, secured women interneses in hospitals, paid for truant officers, founded children's protective associations, installed branches of the Associated Charities, encouraged night schools, circulated art exhibits and travelling libraries; they had placed pictures in the public schools, founded kindergartens—the list seemed inexhaustible.

"Moreover, there was good being done of a less assertive but equally commendable nature. The lines of section grew vague when the social Georgian sat side by side with the genial woman from Michigan. Mrs. Johnson of Minnesota and Mrs. Cabot of Massachusetts; Mrs. Hardin of Kentucky and Mrs. Garcia of California, found no essential differences in each other.

"And then the women of few opportunities—the farmers' wives, representing their earnest clubs; the village women, wistful and rather shy; the emergent, onlooking company of few excursions, few indulgences—what of the Federation for them?

"At first, perhaps, they feared it; but cautiously, like unskilled swimmers, they took their experimental strokes. They found themselves secure; heard themselves applauded. They acquired boldness, and presently were exhilarated by the consciousness of their own power.

"The feminine mind, much in action, shooting back and forth like a shuttle, was weaving a curious and admirable fabric.

"In places it was even beautiful. Now and then it gave suggestions of the grotesque. It was shot through with the silver of talent, the gold of genius. And with all its defects it was splendid, because the warp thereof was purpose and the woof enthusiasm."
